Edwin Fox, Esq., Totland Bay, Isle of Wight.
Lieut.-Col. J. Walker, Broom Hill, Colchester.
G. H. Hogan, Esq., 33, Martin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.
Bankers—The Capital and Counties Bank, Threadneedle-street, London, and branches.
Secretary and Offices—Mr. R. J. Palmer, 17, Great George-street, Westminster.

This company has been formed for the purpose of giving railway communication between Freshwater, Yarmouth, Calbourne, Carisbrooke, and Newport, in the Isle of Wight.

It will be seen, by referring to the map accompanying the prospectus, that the railways already constructed in the Isle of Wight are entirely confined to and serve only the eastern half of the island. It will, therefore, be evident that this railway must command the whole of the traffic in this important district of the western half of the Isle of Wight.

The length of this new railway is 12½ miles. It commences by a junction with the Isle of Wight Central Railway at Newport, and will thereby be put into direct railway communication with Cowes, Ryde, Ventnor, and all the principal towns in the island, besides accommodating such popular places of holiday resort as Totland Bay, Alum Bay, the Needles, and Freshwater.

The Isle of Wight Central Railway Company has entered into an agreement, dated 5th March, 1888, to find all the rolling stock and to work and maintain this company's line upon the terms of receiving 55 per cent. of the gross traffic receipts, and paying this company 45 per cent. This arrangement secures a permanent income to this company from the day the line is opened.

The railway is connected by a system of first-class steamers with the London and South-Western Railway, the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway, and the Midland Railway.

The passenger traffic, by means of these steamships, running from Weymouth, Swanage, Bournemouth, and Lymington to Totland Bay and Yarmouth, is assuming large proportions, most of whom, being excursionists, will, when the line is opened, be enabled to visit Carisbrooke Castle (near to which there is a station), Newport, and other inland places of interest.

The goods traffic will also be heavy and remunerative.

The traffic receipts of the 12½ miles of existing railways in the Isle of Wight for the year 1887 averaged ...... £32 per mile per week.
And for the half-year ending 31st December, 1887 ...... £39 " "
And for the week ending August 11th, 1888 ...... £[illegible] " "

The directors, therefore, feel justified in assuming that the foregoing average will be fully obtained by this company's line. But, estimating traffic receipts at only two-thirds of above, say £21 per mile per week, the gross annual income will be ...... £13,650 0 0

Less 55 per cent. for working expenses as above ...... £7,507 10 0
And interest on debenture capital ...... 2,365 10 0 | 9,873 0 0

Leaving ...... £3,777 10 0

Whereas only £2,100 per annum is required to pay the interest on the Preference Shares.

In addition to the above income, this company is to retain the whole of the rents for the refreshment rooms, bookstalls, arches, and advertisements, which will be a valuable source of revenue.

These Preference Shares are, therefore, exceptionally well secured, and afford a remarkably good investment for capital.

Allotments will be made strictly in order of application. Where no allotment is made the money will be returned forthwith in full.

Stock Exchange settlement and quotation will be applied for in due course.

Prospectuses and forms of application for shares can be obtained at the bankers'; or of the Secretary, at the offices of the company.

Applications will be received at the company's offices up to and including October.

All applications must be addressed to the Royal Exchange Bank (Limited).

ORDINARY SHARES in McNAMARA and COMPANY (Limited), Contractors for her Majesty's Mails and general railway and cartage agents, under contract with her Majesty's Postmaster-General. Business established 1845. Incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1886. Capital, £120,000, in 7,000 Eight per Cent. £10 Cumulative Preference Shares, all of which have been allotted to the public, and 5,000 Ordinary Shares of £10.

The Royal Exchange Bank (Limited) is authorised by the holders of 1,000 of the above ordinary shares to receive applications for them at par, being the first which have been offered for public subscription, payable as follows: £1 per share on application, and the balance, £9 per share, on or before October 31st, 1888.

The business of McNamara and Co. (Limited) is too well known in the metropolis to need any detailed description here. The red vehicles belonging to the company, employed by the Post Office, are a well-known feature in the traffic of the metropolis, and traverse the streets daily in all directions.

Since the formation of the concern into a limited company, which took place as per prospectus dated July 11, 1887, the good reputation of the business has not only been maintained, but improved, as shown by the following extract from the report of the directors presented to the shareholders at the first annual general meeting, held on the 10th ultimo:

"The business of the company is in a satisfactory condition.

"A further contract has been entered into with the Postmaster-General for the working of the London and Brighton Parcels Mail."

The requirements of the carrying trade of the metropolis are so greatly increasing from day to day that the general cartage part of this undertaking can be considerably extended, and the company is in the best possible position to secure and deal with additional business.

The remunerative nature of the business is evidenced by the fact that the net profit for the first year, after writing £[illegible] off the capital account for depreciation, and an ample estimated amount to provide for outstanding claims and expenses properly attributable to the year's working, were £[illegible] 17s. 4d.

Out of this amount the directors placed the sum of £[illegible] 18s. 0d. to the credit of the reserve fund, created in accordance with Article 119 of the company's articles of association, and paid the sum of £4,[illegible], the amount of the dividend, at the rate of £8 per cent. per annum upon the preference shares of the company.

A dividend of 6 per cent. per annum was also paid upon the ordinary shares, leaving a balance of £717 7s. 4d. to be carried forward to the credit of next account.

A further most satisfactory feature is that, owing to the success of the London and Brighton Parcels Mail Service, according to the following extract from a leader in the "Times" of the 31st ult., upon the Postmaster-General's report and statistics, the further development of such services may be expected.

"It will be news to many, and in curious contradiction to the general tendency of railways to absorb all land transport, that a parcel service by coach to Brighton was established last year, and that the result has been satisfactory enough to lead the Post Office to plan an extension of this system."

The ordinary shares of the company confer on the holders the right to have the surplus profits paid to them after the payment of the said preferential (cumulative) dividend, subject to the company's articles of association.

Even if the last dividend of 6 per cent. be only maintained, the ordinary shares at par are an extremely cheap and good investment. This will be seen by the following prices of other commercial and industrial undertakings according to the September share Market Report:

| Name of Company. | Last div. per cent. | Amount paid up. | Price. | Prem. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Metropolitan Railway Carriage | 6½ | 5 | 6½ | 1½ |
| McEwan, James | 5 | 10 | 13½ | 3½ |
| London Street Tramways | 6 | 10 | 13 | 3 |
| Edinburgh Street Tramways | 8 | 10 | 12½ | 2½ |
| Anglo-Argentine Tramways | 8 | 5 | 5½ | ½ |
| Tramways of Germany | 6½ | 10 | 13½ | 3½ |
| Cope's Tobacco | 6 | 5 | 5½ | ½ |
| General Hydraulic | 3½ | 5 | 9½ | 4½ |
| Harrison and Barber | 6 | 5 | 5½ | ½ |
| Improved Wood Pavement | 5 | 10 | 11½ | 1½ |
| Milner's Safe | 3½ | 10 | 10½ | ½ |
| National Telephone | 4½ | 5 | 5½ | ½ |
| Nettlefolds | 5 | 10 | 14 | 4 |
| Pawson and Co. | 5½ | 6 | 6½ | ½ |
| Price's Patent Candle | 6½ | 16 | 20½ | 4½ |

At the first annual general meeting of the shareholders, held on the 10th ult., there was a very strong expression from those present that a Stock Exchange quotation should be applied for; but the chairman explained that one of the rules of the Stock Exchange had not been complied with, viz., that two-thirds of the whole nominal capital of £120,000 should be applied for and unconditionally allotted to the public; consequently £80,000 should have been offered to the public, and as the Preferred Share capital issued is only £70,000, it is necessary to offer not less than 1,000 of the ordinary £10 shares—namely, £10,000 (which formed part of the payment by the company for the business) for public subscription to entitle an application to be considered by the Stock Exchange Committee for a quotation of the shares.

Application for the whole or any part of these 1,000 Ordinary Shares may be made on the form enclosed with the prospectus, and must be forwarded to the Royal Exchange Bank (Limited), 125, Cannon-street, London, E.C., with a cheque for the deposit on the shares applied for.

Should a less number of shares be apportioned than is applied for, the surplus paid on application will be appropriated towards the last instalment.

Further application forms may be had at the Royal Exchange Bank (Limited).

28th September, 1888.

The following are the directors of the company, whose offices are in Castle-street, Finsbury, E.C.:

The bonds, of which the present issue forms part, are issued in accordance with the terms of the general bond (as printed on the third page of the prospectus), direct by the Government of Entre Rios, one of the leading provinces of the Argentine Republic, under its general responsibility, and are, together with the said issue of £[illegible], further secured as a first mortgage on the Central Railway extensions, of an intended total length of [illegible] kilometres, and consisting of four branches, connecting the Entre Rios Central Railway with the towns of Victoria, Gualeguay, Villaguay, and Gualeguaychu, being the principal towns of the province next to the capital (Parana). A map of the existing line and the extensions now in course of construction accompanies the prospectus.

The bonds are further secured on the contribucion directa (income or property tax) and the tablada (tax on animals, produce, &c.) of the Province of Entre Rios, subject to the charge given in favour of the bonds issued in respect of the existing line.

The construction of the railways is progressing rapidly, and the whole of the extensions is expected to be completed and opened for public traffic in the course of next year.

The principal of the bonds is redeemable at par by a fixed accumulative sinking fund of 1 per cent. per annum by half-yearly drawings, the first to be made in the February or August, as the case may be, after the opening of the above-named railways. The Government reserves to itself the right to increase at any time, and from time to time, the amortisation fund, and to redeem a part or the whole of the bonds at any of the dates fixed for the redemption, paying for them at par.

If no allotment is made the deposit will be returned without deduction.

A translation of (1) the special laws, authorising the issue of the bonds, (2) the contracts between the Government and the contractor for the construction of the railways which permit the issue of the bonds at the price and on the terms of this prospectus; (3) the bond, as approved by the Government, can be inspected at the offices of Messrs. DAVID JOHN and COMPANY (Limited). ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The company is formed for the purpose of acquiring from Mr. John Davies, the trade of the Mardy Brewery, Mardy, Rhondda Valley, South Wales, the tied trade of several large hotels, the well-known Pentre Brewery, and the old-established wine, spirit, bottled beer and stout business of Mr. David John, of The Pentre, Rhondda Valley, successfully carried on by him for the past 25 years, and

1. The capital eight-quarter brewery, with modern plant in good condition and working order, capable of turning out 10,000 barrels per annum—the present output being at the rate of 6,500 barrels a year—held on lease for about 90 years, at the extremely low rent of £3 per annum.

2. The bottling stores, offices, and premises, fitted with every requirement for the trade. These are held for about 80 years, at £1 15s. per annum. Mr. John supplies by far the greater portion of the bottled ales and stout consumed in the Rhondda Valley, and is Messrs. Bass's agent for the district.

3. The plant, machinery, rolling stock, horses, book debts, and goodwill.

4. The secured trade of four large hotels attached to the Mardy Brewery and 13 public-houses and hotels, belonging and tied to the Pentre Brewery, making in all 17 tied houses, all of which are situate in thickly-populated mining districts of the Rhondda. Two of these houses have the exclusive trade of Mardy, which is one of the most flourishing and prosperous places in the Rhondda. A large free trade is also done.

The various properties and stocks have been examined on behalf of the company by Messrs. W. and S. Hern, of Cardiff, Auctioneers, Estate Agents, and Accountants, who have also audited and examined Mr. John's books for several years past. Their certificate is appended.

DAVID JOHN and COMPANY (Limited).
"Cardiff, August 15th, 1888.

"We have made a careful examination of the brewery, brewery plant, trade appliances, rolling stock, horses, and stock-in-trade in and about the Pentre Brewery, and the wine, spirit, and beer stores, all situate at Pentre, Rhondda Valley, and also the leasehold hotels, public houses, and properties about to be purchased by the company. These, with the goodwill and book debts of the business, together with the trade of the Mardy Brewery—in fact, the whole of the above as a going concern, we value at forty-[illegible] thousand seven hundred and twenty-two pounds one shilling and [illegible] (£[illegible],722 1s. [illegible]).

"For several years past we have audited the brewery books, and also the wine, spirit, and bottled beer accounts kept by Mr. David John, at Pentre, and we hereby certify, after making allowance for bad debts and depreciation, that the profits for the year ending 31st December, 1887, amount to ...... £[illegible] 2 11
Add profit rentals of houses ...... 375 0 0
£[illegible] 2 11

We have also examined the books to ascertain the amount of business done during the current year, and consider that the year's profits should show an increase of fully £[illegible].

"(Signed) W. and S. Hern, Public Accountants, Auctioneers, &c."

Since the foregoing valuation was made one of the houses mentioned in it has been let on lease, the tenant agreeing to pay £[illegible] premium, the exact sum at which Messrs. W. and S. Hern valued it. It is proposed to set aside £500 of this sum as the nucleus of a reserve fund.

Certified profits as above ...... £[illegible] 2 11
The estimated profits from increased trade, and the connection of the Mardy Brewery ...... [illegible] 0 0
£[illegible] 2 11

The capital now issued and called up would be as follows:
£23,200 in Preference Shares at 6 per cent. ...... £1,392 0 0
£20,000 in Ordinary Shares at 12 per cent. ...... £2,400 0 0 | £[illegible] 0 0
£44,000 Purchase-money.
Surplus ...... £[illegible] 2 11

W. and S. Hern, Cardiff, prospectuses and forms of application may be had.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

ROSARIO CITY IMPROVEMENTS COMPANY (Limited). (Fixed municipal rate on all the properties within the drainage area of the city).—Capital, £460,000 Six per Cent. Debentures, £[illegible] in [illegible] shares of £10 each (one-half of the shares being Preferred and the other half Ordinary).—ISSUE of the £460,000 SIX PER CENT. DEBENTURES, irredeemable for 20 years. Price of issue, £96 per £100, payable as follows:

£10 per cent. on application,
£20 " on allotment,
£20 " on 15th January, 1889,
£20 " on 15th April, 1889,
£26 " on 1st July, 1889.
£96

Interest at 6 per cent. per annum will accrue from the dates of payment of the instalments.

Subscribers can pay up in full on allotment, and a rebate will be allowed at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum.

The River Plate Trust, Loan, and Agency Company (Limited) are authorised by the company to receive subscriptions for the above £460,000 Six per Cent. Debentures.

These debentures will have a first charge on the company's undertaking, including the drainage rate after-mentioned.

The principal is repayable on the 1st July, 1909, being 20 years from the intended date of issue of the definitive debentures.

The interest will be payable half-yearly at the bankers of the company in London.

The debentures will be issued to bearer, and be stamped so as to pass by delivery, but can be converted into registered debentures when desired.

Scrip certificates to bearer will be first issued to be exchanged for the definitive debentures after payment of all the instalments.

Where no allotment is made the deposit will be returned in full, and if a smaller amount of debentures than applied for is allotted, the balance of the deposit will go towards the amount payable on allotment.

The City of Rosario is the second commercial city in the Argentine Republic. It is an important railway centre, and ocean steamers can load and unload at the port without lighters, thus bringing it into direct steam communication with Europe.

Its population has been estimated at over 70,000.

In Mulhall's well-known "Handbook of the River Plate" (Edition 1885) it is said:

"Rosario has grown more rapidly than either Liverpool or Buenos Ayres, its commerce and population multiplying ten-fold in 20 years. It has no parallel for rapid development, unless in California or Australia. The commerce, compared to population, is much above Buenos Ayres or any European or American port, except Liverpool."

The number of building licenses issued by the municipality during last year (1887) was about 1,400, and this year it is progressing at a still higher rate.

The city, notwithstanding its excellent position on high ground, has been for many years suffering from a very serious death-rate, owing to its having had no proper water supply, and to its being dependent entirely on cesspools for sanitary purposes. The former want has now been supplied by an excellent system of waterworks, and a concession has been granted by the municipality for a complete system of drainage and sewerage works, which this company has been formed to carry out.

The principal features of this concession are as follows:

1. The use of the drainage is obligatory.
2. Payment of drainage rates according to a fixed scale of [illegible] cents, per month for every lineal metre of frontage becomes compulsory in respect of every square of sewers within the drainage limits (with certain exceptions as to public buildings, &c.) 30 days after the completion of the same in accordance with the concession, with the same prerogatives for the collection thereof as are accorded to the ordinary municipal taxes.
3. The rate is payable monthly, in gold.
4. The owner of each property is made liable for the rate.
5. The concession is for 70 years, after which the works revert to the municipality. After 20 years the municipality may expropriate the works for a sum, in cash, which, at 6 per cent. interest, would produce an annual income equal to the net income during the year previous to the expropriation, and a premium of 20 per cent. in addition.

For the more efficient working of the sewers, provision has been made for their daily flushing, by a contract between the waterworks company and the concessionaire, under which the waterworks company are to charge "only for the cost of the water."

The amount of the drainage rate leviable on the existing properties within the drainage area on the basis of the concession has been ascertained by measurement of the frontages to be over £50,000 a year. The debenture interest is £27,600, leaving therefore £23,000 a year for working expenses (estimated at under £10,000) and dividend on shares. The revenue will, of course, go on increasing with the growth of the city, and the extension of the drainage area.

The rate, as a rule, is not more (and in many cases it is even less) than the expense of the periodical clearance of the existing cesspools as required by the authorities.

The concession has been obtained under the advice of eminent counsel in the Argentine Republic, who advise that the contract of concession is valid under the constitution and laws of the province of Santa Fé, in which Rosario is situate.

The drainage works were designed by the company's engineer, Mr. J. F. W. Featherstonhaugh, C.E., and were accepted by the municipality after all the tenders had been referred to Mr. W. White, late President of the Council of Engineers of the Argentine Government, for examination. The plans, &c., were also examined and approved by Mr. S. Abbott, C.E., of the Great Southern Railway of Buenos Ayres, and have since been submitted to Sir Joseph Bazalgette, C.E., whose report on the scheme is very favourable.

Messrs. John G. Meiggs, Son, and Co., Contractors, of London and Buenos Ayres (who have carried out and are still engaged on many public works in the Argentine Republic) have contracted with the company for the construction and completion of the works to the satisfaction of the municipality and of the company's engineer, and also for the transfer of the concession to the company in consideration of the whole of the shares and debentures of the company as given above or the proceeds thereof. The contract provides for the payment by the contractors of interest on the debentures and administration expenses during construction. The contract also provides for the company issuing the debentures at the request of the contractors, at whose request the present issue is made.

The date fixed by the contract for the completion of the works is the 1st October, 1891. The first section will, it is expected, be completed and earning revenue within fifteen months from this date.

The works contract between Messrs. John G. Meiggs, Son, and Co., and the company; the translation of the contract of concession, and of the opinion of counsel (Dr. Quintana, of Buenos Ayres, and Dr. Arias, of Rosario), thereon; the flushing contract with the waterworks company; the reports of Sir Joseph Bazalgette and Mr. J. F. W. Featherstonhaugh, on the scheme; the memorandum and articles of association of the company, and the form of debenture, can be seen at the offices of the solicitors to the company.

Prospectuses and forms of application can be obtained from the bankers and solicitors, and at the offices of the River Plate Trust, Loan, and Agency Company (Limited), No. 61, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

I believe the different offices are more replete with comfort and accommodation than any banking establishment in London, and I know I have more telephones and other recording instruments than any five similar establishments.
JOHN SHAW'S SYSTEM of BUSINESS.—He offers more liberal terms for dealing than any dealer in London or elsewhere. Get advice where you choose, but deal where you get the best terms, and possible losses will result in positive profits.
For the use and information of his clients, JOHN SHAW has prepared the following:
Highest and lowest prices for the past five years of all the leading Stocks and Shares, together with the dividends paid during the same period.
Railway Weekly Traffic Returns Book for the Current Half-year, with corresponding figures for 1886 and 1887.
Telegraphic Code, for Transmission of Telegrams by Cypher.
The above should be applied for by all speculators and investors, and will be forwarded free of charge.
JOHN SHAW, London, will be sufficient address for Telegrams for City Office.
SPECULATIVE INVESTMENTS.
This is one of the best methods of making money on the Stock Exchange, and for any one who has spare capital it presents most favourable opportunities of making certain profits. Thus:
URUGUAY.
I have continuously advised the purchase of Uruguay since they were 45, at which price they paid interest at the rate of 11¼ per cent. They have since been 78. An investor would have thus received a dividend of 11¼ per cent., and increased every £100 capital invested to £176 14s. 3d.
CANADIAN PACIFICS.
I followed Canadian Pacifics from 38 to 73. At the former price they paid interest at the rate of 7½ per cent., showing an increase in value on every £100 capital invested of £97 13s. 6d., so that an investor would have received 7½ per cent. on the capital invested, and could also have sold the shares at nearly double their cost.
EGYPT. UNIFIED.
I have also advised Egypt. Unified since they were 60, at which price they would pay 6⅔ per cent. They have since been 85, so that for every £100 invested the investor would have been enabled to realise £141 11s. 10d.
PORTUGUESE.
I recommended Portuguese when they were 44½, paying 6¾ per cent.; they have been 64¾, or an increase of 46 per cent. on the capital invested.
MEXICAN BONDS.
Prior to the recent rearrangements in the Mexican Government Stocks, I advised Mexican Bonds as a good deferred investment; they could have been purchased at 22½; they were afterwards 43, showing an improvement on the capital invested of 91 per cent.
£5 COMMANDS £500 STOCK.
£10 " 1,000 "
£20 " 2,000 "
£50 " 5,000 "
NO OTHER LIABILITY WHATEVER.
PRESENT ADVICES for INVESTMENT SENT FREE by POST.
IN OPERATING I GIVE YOU THIS ADVICE, whether you deal with me or elsewhere.
1. Let your profits run.
2. Do not follow a loss more than two per cent.; all heavy losses are invariably made with unlimited cover. Run profits and cut losses.
3. Remember, you know your risk when you limit your cover.
4. Do not deal with firms of whom you know nothing, however specious their representations, or you will lose both your cover and profits. Make due inquiries.
FOR the USE and INFORMATION of SPECULATORS and INVESTORS, JOHN SHAW has COMPILED and ISSUES FREE the following WORKS:

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY EVENING.

Some important gold operations occurred at the Bank, about £360,000 in sovereigns being withdrawn for South America and £135,000 sent in, nearly all in bars, from the Bank of France. The latter institution is apparently more disposed to let out a considerable portion of its stock of gold, which, according to the last return, reached £42,758,000. It is certain that a movement to 5 per cent. here would compel a further rise in the French minimum. The present rate is 3½ per cent., but for a period of about five years it was maintained at 3, and a high value of money in France is unusual and might cause some trouble. The financial position there is not strong, taxation being excessive, while an enormous amount of money has been locked up in the Panama Canal and the copper speculation. A heavy loan has also been talked of for some time past, and will probably be introduced early next year, if not before. According to rumour, the French Bank will part with one or two millions sterling in gold on the understanding that our rate is maintained at 4 per cent. An agreement to this extent, with the uncertainty as to the future bullion wants of South America and other quarters, is hardly likely, but the fact of the moment is that gold is now being sold more freely by that institution, and our requirements may thus be sensibly relieved. The total on the way from Australia and the East—£235,000—is likewise larger than expected, and of this amount nearly £160,000 is due on Friday, mostly in sovereigns, and these will be retained here. But the Bank of England to-day exacted 4½ per cent. for advances, and a charge beyond the minimum is generally the precursor of a rise. Outside money was in request at 4 per cent., the market being influenced by the withdrawal of £500,000 by the India Council, calls on various securities to the amount of one million, and large temporary withdrawals in connection with the payment of coupons due to-day, Oct. 1. Late in the afternoon, however, short loans were offered at 3. Bills were quoted 4 per cent., subject, in some cases, to the terms of Thursday. Three months' Treasury drafts were taken at an average rate of £3 16s 9d per cent., and six months' at £3 9s 9d, chiefly, it is stated, by the leading banks. At Paris money is in demand at 3½ per cent., but in Berlin the outside quotation has declined to 3½.

Under the influence of the fine weather and the strong return of the New York banks, the stock markets opened firm, and some securities improved. However, the large efflux of specie and fears of dearer money subsequently caused a relapse, and, except American railroads, the final prices showed a decline, compared with Saturday. Consols were freely sold and fell about ⅛ per cent. Preparations for the monthly settlement in the Funds, which commenced this morning, developed a large floating supply of stock, and the rate of continuation was as high as 4½ per cent. per annum, or 1⅞ more than the interest yielded by "Goschens." Foreign bonds were offered, chiefly in response to Continental prices, and Egyptian Daira, Greek, Hungarian, Italian, Mexican, Portuguese, Turkish Tributes, and Uruguayan gave way. A decline also occurred in Cedulas, but Argentine Treasury and Hard Dollars, some of the Russian, Spanish, and Venezuelan improved. An almost general fall was apparent in Colonial debentures, the chief movement—2 to 4 per cent.—being in Quebec.

On the transactions of the day English railways were lower. Glasgow and South-Western, Hull and Barnsley, North-Western, North-Eastern, Great Western, and Great Eastern fell ½ to 1 per cent. The Southern lines were rather flatter, the traffics just issued being considered disappointing. The Brighton exhibits a decrease of £1,045, but the return for the corresponding period of last year comprised some exceptional receipts. American lines were strong all day, and closed at about the best. Apart from easy money in New York and the extent of the "bear" account there, the rise was helped by the favourable news about the yellow fever. Louisvilles were in prominent request and rose 1⅜. Eries, Denvers, Missouris, Norfolk and Westerns, Readings, and Milwaukees shared in the recovery. Grand Trunks declined on the August working statement, referred to below. Mexican (Vera Cruz) rose a little, and National stocks were inquired for, owing to the completion of the line. Cable securities showed dulness, while miscellaneous were steady. Amongst copper and diamond shares, Mason and Barry, Tinto, Kimberley Central, and De Beers receded to a moderate extent.

Sovereigns to the number of 361,000 were taken from the Bank for the River Plate, and £135,000 in French gold was received. The Fulda, from New York, has brought £36,560 in specie, and the Neva, from the River Plate, £10,590. The Saint Germain has also reached St. Nazaire from Vera Cruz with £40,000. The Massilia is expected on Oct. 5 with £137,280, chiefly in sovereigns, from Australia, and the Peshawur on the same day with £20,870 in gold, mostly from Shanghai.

A consignment of bar silver, ex the Nile, was sold at 43⅝d per ounce, showing an advance of ⅛d. Mexican dollars remained at 42¼d. Bombay Transfers rose 1-16d, to 1s 4½d, and Calcutta 1-32d, to 1s 4 15-32d. Four and a Half per Ct. Rupee Paper improved ⅛, to 72¼, ⅜, and ditto Four per Cts. ⅛, to 68¼, ⅜. Special allotments were made as follows by the India Council: Bills on Bombay, £50,000 at 1s 4½d, and £20,000 at 1s 4 9-16d.

Continental Bourses relapsed, especially the Paris market. Three per Cent. Rentes, on which the carrying-over rate was from 10c to 30c, fell 1½c, to 82f 65c ex div. The Four and a Half per Cents., after allowing for a contango of 32½c, were 32½c down, at 105f 50c. Rio Tinto, Ottoman Bank, Crédit Foncier, Suez Canal, Panama, Egyptian Unified, Hungarian, Greek, Italian, and Portuguese also receded. Exchange on London (cheques) declined 1½c, to 25f 40c. At Berlin Russian, Austrian, and Deutsche Bank were lower, while Prussian Four per Cents. and Lombardo improved.

Tenders for £1,290,000 Treasury Bills were opened at the Bank of England, when £840,000 was allotted in drafts at three months and £450,000 in drafts at six months. Tenders for the former at £99 0s 7d will receive about 55 per cent., above in full; and for the latter at £98 5s and above in full.

With the designation of Wm. Yates and Co. (Limited), a new undertaking has been formed to take over a freehold brewery at Ardwick, in Manchester, besides upwards of forty freehold and long leasehold public-houses in various localities. ## SPECIAL MARKET REPORTS—MONDAY.

LONDON CORN EXCHANGE.—There has been a better business passing at Mark-lane to-day. The sales of home-grown wheat in the leading markets of England and Wales during the four weeks of the season were 159,655qrs, against 347,560 qrs last season, at an average of 35s 10d, against 30s 11d per qr; barley, 9,567, against 124,423 qrs, average 28s 5d, against 27s 8d; and oats, 11,492, against 28,551 qrs, at an average of 18s 4d, against 14s 11d per qr. English wheat met a fair sale, at an advance of about 1s per qr on the week. A fair business was passing in foreign wheat, which frequently made an advance. In the flour market business was quiet, but 3d to 6d dearer. The barley trade was steady, at full prices for both malting and grinding. Oats were 3d to 6d dearer, with a fair demand. Maize was steady, at full prices. Beans and peas have been quiet, and slightly easier on the week. New Canadian peas, 33s to 34s; green Indian, 28s to 29s 6d; Baltic, 32s to 33s; Egyptian lentils, 28s to 30s per 504lb; Smyrna beans, 28s to 28s 6d; Morocco, 26s 6d to 27s per 480lb.

METROPOLITAN CATTLE.—The cattle trade, though quiet, has been rather firmer. The total number of beasts was only 2,600, of which 200 (including 210 from Canada) came from abroad. From Ireland we received 100, Norfolk, Suffolk, and Essex 300, Midland, Home, and Western Counties 2,020. The best Scots and crosses sold at 4s 10d to 5s per 8lb, anything higher being quite exceptional. The total number of sheep was 7,900, of which 1,370 were foreign. There was a slow business doing, and prices had a hardening tendency; but the best Downs and half-breds did not, as a rule, make more than 5s 10d to 6s per 8lb. 140 calves were offered; choice qualities were firm and dearer, other sorts dull. Pigs were quiet. 60 English milch cows made £14 to £23 per head. Statement and comparison of the supplies and prices of stock exhibited and sold in the Metropolitan Cattle Market on Monday, Oct. 3, 1887, and on this day (Monday), Oct. 1, 1888. Full prices are asked for perennial and Italian rye grasses. Sowing rye is very cheap, and the same can be said of trifolium incarnatum. Winter tares are steady in value and demand. Good samples of yearling blue peas are preferred to the new parcels. Canary seed is firmer. Hempseed unchanged.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.—Important to All.—"A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—Adams. Caution: Examine each bottle, and see the capsule is marked "Eno's Fruit Salt." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.—All Chemists. Prepared only at Eno's Fruit Salt Works, London, S.E., by J. C. Eno's Patent.—[ADVT.]

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

NOTES AND ANTICIPATIONS.

The opposition which broke out against Traylés for the Cesarewitch before the conclusion of the Newmarket First October knows no abatement, and he will go from bad to worse if confined any longer to walking exercise. There seems every likelihood that he will be an absentee, and, if my latest information is correct, Decision has "cracked up." This is to be regretted, as his stamina would have enabled him to finish in the front rank. The path looks comparatively clear now for Kenilworth, providing he possesses the merit claimed for him, although he is kept at a fair price, through the demand for Ténébreuse. The scratching of Friar's Balsam for the Cambridgeshire was unexpected, and favouritism now rests in dispute between Bismarck and Mamia, while the third in order comes Minting, who galloped to-day with Gautby, so that hope need not entirely be abandoned in this quarter. The racing of the week has already commenced, and the Nottinghamshire Handicap fell to the share of Diana after a rattling set-to with Arundel and Felix. This was only the third appearance in public this season of Captain Machell's filly, whose chief employment had been to try the Bedford Cottage two-year-olds. Camballina opened the ball with a head victory from Curraghmore in the Juvenile Plate, and another triumph for Newmarket was scored in the Elvaston Castle Plate by the useful Countess Therry. The apprentice-ridden Meadow Brown made short work of her opponents in the Mile Nursery, and a couple of races were secured by Mr. R. Howett, Neil Cook crediting him with the Lenten Fire Selling Plate, and Miss Milly with the All-Aged Plate. To-morrow BLOOD ROYAL may win the Friar Tuck Selling Plate, FALLOW CHAT or TREASURER the Robin Hood Plate, MOHAWK or MERRY LASS the Welbeck Abbey Plate, TEVIOT or the LADY GOSLING COLT the Bestwood Nursery Plate, SCOTTISH MINSTREL the Sherwood Hurdle Handicap, and STELLALAND the Cotgrave Gorse Plate.

At Hamilton Park I have a fancy for QUEEN BERENGARIA in the Maiden Plate, EAST LOTHIAN in the Palace Nursery, EASTERN BEAUTY or ABU KLEA in the Hamilton Stakes, and INGOLDIS in the Lee Plate.

Monday Night. HOTSPUR.

LONDON BETTING—MONDAY.

The business at the clubs upon the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire to-day was of a very poor character, and with two or three of the front rank travelling badly for the first-named event, Kenilworth increased in favouritism, bets of 550 to 100 and 500 to 100 twice being traceable to the Malton colt. Ténébreuse left off firm at 8 to 1, and one could always obtain 100 to 7 about Acmé and Polydor, which pair parted company from Traylés and Decision, who respectively declined to 20 to 1 and 25 to 1. At the latter rate Tonans was best business, and Rhythm was backed at 33 to 1. For the Cambridgeshire Bismarck and Mamia stood on the same mark at 8 to 1 without much money being traceable to either; and as Minting had resumed work he figured at 100 to 8. Gallinule had backers at 100 to 7, but 33 to 1 was offered against Traylés, after 1000 to 40 had been taken. Prices:

MR. BALFOUR IN GLASGOW.

The Chief Secretary for Ireland arrived in Glasgow yesterday afternoon, principally for the purpose of addressing the Conservatives of the city. But first proceeding to the Merchants' Hall, in George-square, he had a meeting with the General Executive of the West of Scotland Liberal Unionist Association, which represents fifty-six branches throughout the twenty-seven constituencies of the west. Professor Sir William Thomson occupied the chair, and there was a large attendance of influential local gentlemen.

Ex-Lord Provost URE read an address, which embodied a resolution welcoming Mr. Balfour on the occasion of his visit to Glasgow, and as staunch Liberals recording their admiration of the patriotic and courageous manner in which he took up the position of the Chief Secretary for Ireland, and the painstaking manner in which he has discharged the duties of his high office, and their regret that his motives should be so constantly aspersed by his political opponents. They also congratulated him upon the diminution of crime and increased respect for the law of the Queen which have resulted from his firm administration, and trusted that he would not relinquish his great task until he had carried as large a measure of reform of the government of Ireland as is consistent with the safety and union of the Empire.

Mr. BALFOUR, who was received with loud cheers, said he was glad of this opportunity of recording his own thanks for the unfailing support which the Liberal Unionist party had given him in the arduous work entrusted to him, and the thanks of his colleagues for the unwavering fidelity of the alliance by means of which they had been able to resist the dismemberment of the Empire. He could not too clearly express his sense of the gigantic debt which this country owed to the Liberal Unionists of England, Scotland, and Ireland. It was not too much to say that without them the party to which he belonged, united and energetic though it were, would have been powerless to resist the overwhelming influence which one great name had had upon the masses of this country. (Cheers.) With the assistance of the Liberal Unionists, so generously given in the past and promised with the like generosity in the future, he did not for one moment doubt that they would be able to bring the present contest to a successful termination. (Cheers.) The so-called Dissentient Liberals represented the true traditions and succession of the Liberal party. The whole Liberal party had really been at one with the Conservative party on the question of the union from the time it was accomplished until very recently, and in now joining their forces with the Conservatives to preserve that union the Liberal Unionists were not making any new departure, but were continuing the traditions which had long influenced alike Liberal and Conservative leaders, and they had carried along with them the great bulk of the intellect and intelligence of the Liberal party. The Liberal Unionist party embraced both Whigs and Radicals, and when he spoke of their leaders a profound regret came over his mind that two great men had been removed from among them at a time when their services would have been absolutely invaluable to the cause which they had at heart. He meant Mr. Forster and Professor Fawcett. (Hear, hear.) Two Liberals more orthodox and straight could not have been found within the four seas. They held strongly that every tradition of progress would be imperilled by destroying the union. If, in addition to men like Lord Hartington, Mr. Chamberlain, and Mr. Bright, in the House of Commons—(cheers)—the Unionist party had been permitted to count on the services of Mr. Forster and Professor Fawcett, he did not believe that even Mr. Gladstone with such allies as he had collected about him would have been able for one moment to resist the united efforts of all that was best in Conservatism and Liberalism. (Loud cheers.) Mr. Chamberlain, with that simple force and lucidity of style in which he had at present no rival amongst Liberal speakers, had pointed out to the public that at this moment they were all in total ignorance of what it was Mr. Gladstone meant when he talked of Home Rule. They knew that Mr. Gladstone did not mean his own bill. The one thing of all that was admitted was that that was given up, but the veil had not been lifted which would enable them to see the measure which was at some future and indefinite period to bless the wishes of the Irish nation. (Laughter.) That was a curious state of things requiring to be accounted for. He accounted for it by the fact that no one really desired Home Rule. He excluded that great mass of voters who could not be said to have an opinion, who had turned round at twenty-four hours' notice, who accepted the bill of Mr. Gladstone as long as he said it was the bill he desired to pass, and who were now ready in serene contentment of mind to accept any other bill which it pleased the great magician to produce from his pocket. (Laughter.) Excluding them, who else desired Home Rule? Did the Irish desire it? He had never been able to discover any of them that did. There was one large section of Irish public opinion in Ireland, and a still larger section of Irish public opinion in America which desired total separation from this country. (Cheers.) If they asked for Home Rule it was only as a step to that further object which they and their fathers had desired for generations. Did the great agricultural class in Ireland desire it? With them the Home Rule movement was a very thin covering for an agrarian revolution. What they desired was other people's property. (Hear, hear.) Did the Irish Parliamentary Party desire Home Rule? They lived by agitation. Agitation was their daily bread. (Laughter and cheers.) Could anyone believe that these gentlemen sincerely desired a measure to be passed which, if it carried out the professed wishes of its authors, would put an end to all agitation whatever? (Hear, hear.) Such a proposition he regarded as absurd. If they desired Home Rule, it was only because they foresaw that it would be the beginning of a fresh agitation, which would afford an even more extensive field for the exercise of their peculiar gifts than the obstruction of English and Scotch business at Westminster. (Laughter and cheers.) The Gladstonian-Parnellite party had prophesied that the union of the Unionist party would only last a few months, and would not stand the strain of a session, or the strain of a vacation, which was pretty nearly as bad. How far had these amiable prophecies been accomplished? Every month during the last two years had seen the bonds which united the leaders of the Liberal-Conservative-Unionist party drawn closer and closer together. (Cheers.) The policy of the party consisted of two "planks," as the Americans say. They desired to maintain the Union; they desired also, by reform, to remove all those causes which brought into the ranks of those opposed to the Union classes who, if they were satisfied, would probably sink into contented, peaceful, and useful citizens. (Cheers.) He wished to see some measure of agrarian reform carried into effect which should altogether remove from among the ranks of their opponents that class of tenant farmers in Ireland who were seduced, not by the cry of Home Rule or of Independence, but by those other less honourable motives put before them by designing agitators. He would have regarded it two years ago as a cruel aspersion upon the character of their opponents to say that they did not care for the safe-guarding of law and order, but their conduct during the last two years had forced the Unionist party to regard themselves as the sole guardians of those principles, without which the very elements of civilisation could not continue. (Cheers.) They were the guardians of law and order. They were the guardians of the poor against oppression and of the rich against spoliation. (Cheers.) They were the guardians of every class, creed, and sect. They would carry out their duties without fear, flinching, or favouritism, unmoved by the overwhelming torrent of mendacious calumny poured upon them from day to day, impartial between man and man, and between class and class, and showing no more favour to the member of Parliament than they did to the poor victim of his rhetoric. (Cheers.) They were determined that it should never be said of them that for any electioneering motive they abandoned the strict course they had marked out for themselves. (Cheers.) One sophistical tongue had with extraordinary plausibility described the policy of the Government as inconsistent with the higher morality. He (Mr. Balfour) was glad the Liberal and Radical Unionists had not for one moment allowed themselves to be led astray, and he hoped that as they had supported the Government in maintaining the Union they would encourage the Government to bring forward those reforms on which the ultimate contentment of Ireland must depend. (Loud cheers.)

Mr. Balfour then left the hall amid the cheers of the Liberal Unionists.

The Conservative meeting in the evening was held in St. Andrew's Hall, a building which contains about 4,000 persons. It was densely crowded. The Chief Secretary was received with great enthusiasm as he entered. The chair was taken by Sir Archibald Campbell, M.P., who was supported by the Duke of Argyll, the Earl of Galloway, the Lord Advocate, M.P., the Solicitor-General for Scotland, Mr. Baird, M.P., Mr. Coningsby Disraeli, Sir A. Orr-Ewing, M.P., Admiral Sir John Dalrymple Hay, Sir Michael Shaw-Stewart, Sir John Neilson Cuthbertson, Professor Sir William Thomson, Sir Charles Dalrymple, M.P., Professor Sir George M'Leod, and many other Conservatives and Liberal-Unionists of Glasgow.

After a short speech from the CHAIRMAN,

Mr. BALFOUR, who was again loudly cheered, said that instead of discussing with those present some question of imperial politics, he thought it was necessary that he should reply to the charges recently made against the Irish administration. He had resolved to survey the whole of that part of the recent Irish controversy which dealt with the treatment of those whom it was the unfortunate fashion to describe as political prisoners in Ireland. (Cheers.) The question of Home Rule had sunk into the background. Evidently their Liberal friends considered it not a good card to play. (A Voice: "Three cheers for the Grand Old Man!" followed by cries of "Put him out!") If the gentleman in the corner who had called out would be good enough to inform him what the policy of that eminent statesman was, he should be greatly obliged to him—(cheers)—because the one and only thing upon which the Gladstonian Radicals were agreed was that the Gladstonian bill was utterly inadequate to meet the requirements of Ireland, and while they had blown up their own bill they had not so far condescended to substitute any other bill in its place. (Cheers.) Nothing could exceed the disunion of the Disunionist party, except the union of the Unionist party. (Hear, hear.) In the absence of a substantive policy of their own, the Separatist party had found it convenient to attack the Government. The design of all the Gladstonian and Parnellite proceedings was not to prove that Home Rule was the proper thing for Ireland, but to prove that what they called the "Dissentient Liberals" and Conservatives were utterly mistaken in the methods they applied, that they were guilty of transactions unworthy of a civilised people, and that they had violated the elementary principles of political morality. They had suppressed all that Government had done and all that they had attempted to do for the people of Ireland. They declared untruly and calumniously that the Government's policy was only a policy of coercion, and having thus misdescribed their policy they proceeded with a recklessness and fertility of invention which had never been equalled to describe what went on in Ireland for the sole purpose of turning against the Government the moral feeling of the masses in the great centres of population. (Cheers.) How had they carried out their scheme? They had established a regular manufacture of grievances. (Laughter.) They might be described as a great firm engaged in turning out horrors by the ton, and like other great businesses theirs might be divided into two branches. There was a manufacturing branch proper, and there was an advertising branch—(laughter)—and these were carried on by different individuals. The most distinguished member of the manufacturing branch was Mr. Wm. O'Brien, and in the advertisement branch Mr. Gladstone stood pre-eminent. (Cheers.) Having dealt at length with the cases of Mr. Mandeville and Mr. O'Brien, the right hon. gentleman said, in conclusion, that he did not believe that even Mr. Gladstone would succeed long in deceiving the people of this country, or that he would succeed in hastening by one instant the consummation with regard to his bill that he desired. He did not deny that such attacks as those of Mr. Gladstone did harm. They did no harm to him (Mr. Balfour) or to his party, but they did harm by embittering the feelings of the Irish people against the majority of their fellow-countrymen of England and Scotland. By such arts Mr. Gladstone might diminish the value of the "union of hearts," of which he and his friends were so constantly talking, and to which they contributed so little. Yet, as truth and common-sense regained their sway, he believed that Ireland, like Scotland, would recognise that every element of national life, every object for which a patriot might strive, was better attained under the Union than it would be by separation, and that in the policy which the Unionist party advocated was to be found not merely the advantage of the whole, but the advantage of every separate integral part of this United Kingdom. (Loud cheers.)

On the motion of the Duke of ARGYLL, seconded by Mr. J. BAIRD, M.P., the meeting passed a resolution conveying to the Prime Minister and his Cabinet its "high sense of the services rendered by them to the country."

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

WESTMINSTER.—THE WIFE MURDER IN WESTMINSTER.—John Brown, 45, described as a labourer, working in St. James's Park, was charged before Mr. Partridge with murdering his wife Sarah by cutting her throat, at 11, Regent-gardens, Regency-street, Westminster.—Chief Superintendent Dunlop attended on behalf of the Commissioners of Police.—It is stated that the deceased woman had requested the authorities without success to put her husband under restraint as being at times unaccountable for his actions, and likely to murder her, and that on Saturday night, in a state of terror, she went to the parochial district medical officer and also expressed her apprehensions to the police.—Constable Powell, 499 A, deposed that at eleven o'clock on Saturday night he was at the police-station (Rochester-row) door when the prisoner came running up and said, "I have stabbed my wife." He repeated the statement to the inspector on duty.—Inspector Fairey, A Division, gave evidence as to the prisoner making a confession and being charged. Witness went to Regency-gardens, and in a front room on the ground floor of No. 11 he found a woman lying in a pool of blood, with her head near the fireplace, and her throat cut in two places. She was quite dead. The spring-backed knife found on the accused and produced had evidently been recently sharpened.—Constable Brown, 88A, corroborated Inspector Fairey's evidence as to what occurred in the charge-room, and said that on his receiving orders to look after the prisoner the latter said, "I shan't run away. I am only too glad to get here." After inquiries had been made at the house the accused took the spring-backed knife out of his pocket and said, "This is what I have done it with. I hope she is dead; she has led me a pretty dance."—Detective-sergeant Waldock said that he went to 11, Regency-gardens with a constable after the prisoner had given himself up. On arriving there he found two little boys in their shirts standing at the door crying. The accused is their step-father. Witness went into the front parlour of the house and saw a woman with her throat cut lying on the floor, her head resting on her right arm. There was a large quantity of blood about, and she was quite dead, though still warm.—Mr. Charles Redding, hard metal worker, living at 12, Regency-gardens, next door to the little three-roomed house occupied solely by the prisoner and his family, stated that during the last three months of their residence there the husband and wife had frequently quarrelled. Shortly before eleven o'clock on Saturday he heard a noise of scuffling in the defendant's front room, then a cry of distress from a woman, "Oh, don't." This was followed by a dull thud on the floor, and all became quiet. He went to the door of his house immediately, and he saw the prisoner leaving his front door, which he slammed after him. He very hurriedly left the gardens.—Mr. Partridge: Did you speak to him?—Witness: No. My wife and I went to knock at his door, as we were alarmed. The eldest boy, Robert Young, opened it, and he made a statement which caused my wife to go for a policeman.—Mr. L. Archer, M.R.C.S. Eng., of 38, Vincent-square, Westminster, said that he was called by the police to the deceased on Saturday night. She had two cuts on her throat, one only a deep flesh wound an inch and a half long, and a lower one which had divided the upper part of the trachea and gone right back to the backbone. Deceased was about forty years of age and healthy.—Robert Young, a stepson of the accused, nine years of age, said that the prisoner came home from work on Saturday afternoon, and his mother was frightened of him. She intended to leave him on Saturday night. He told her that he had "something in a box" for her, and that then he intended to give himself up. Witness knew his mother went out to see her eldest daughter, and though he had been sent to bed he heard his stepfather going in and out. He heard no noise of a scuffle, and was aroused by the knocking of the neighbours. By the Magistrate: Six or seven weeks ago the accused went to Westminster Hospital, and was there three or four weeks. He subsequently went to a convalescent home, and on his return there was something the matter with him. He kept saying that witness's mother let men into the house, and he used to look for them before he went to work in the morning and when he came home at night, lighting matches to peer into corners. One night he walked about and lit an entire box of matches. He sharpened the large knife produced every day before his mother, both at dinner and tea times, although he did not use it with his meals. On Saturday when the accused came home from work deceased told witness that the prisoner was going to try and kill her. Prisoner never got drunk; he was a thoroughly sober man, and only had a little beer at night-time.—Detective-Inspector Marshall stated that there would be other witnesses on a future occasion.—Superintendent Dunlop asked for a remand, and the prisoner, who had asked no questions and all along maintained an indifferent attitude, was remanded for eight days.

LAMBETH.—PUTTING A CHILD IN A BOX.—Elizabeth Bottwood was brought up on remand for unlawfully assaulting her step-daughter, aged nine years, by shutting her in a box.—The prisoner now said she was sorry for what had taken place, but she had had a drop of drink at the time and the child annoyed her.—Mr. Biron said the accused might have caused very serious injury to the girl. He sentenced the prisoner to one month's hard labour.

GREENWICH.—THE CHARGE OF BIGAMY AGAINST A CONSTABLE.—John William Buckingham, 32, a police-constable of the R Division, was charged on remand with intermarrying with Elizabeth Souster Bailey, of 8, Westbourne-buildings, Bayswater-road, his wife, Mary Elizabeth Buckingham, of 49, Eaton-place, Belgrave-square, being then and now alive.—Prisoner reserved his defence, and Mr. Fenwick committed him for trial at the Central Criminal Court, agreeing to accept bail.

LAW NOTICES—THIS DAY.

BANKRUPTCY.—DEPARTMENT OF THE CHIEF OFFICIAL RECEIVER.—First meetings of creditors.—At 33, CAREY-STREET: Hy. Mitchell, at 11—L. Baumann, at 11—E. R. Marshall, at 12—F. B. Hill, at 12.

ENGLISH ART AT THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—Sir Frederick Leighton, President of the Royal Academy, has addressed a letter to the Royal Academy, in which he deplores the decision of the French Government to bear no part in the expenses of a British Fine Art Section at the forthcoming international exhibition, and he adds that he finds it difficult to resign himself wholly to the humiliating absence of English artists on this occasion, when lovers of art will flock to the French capital from every part of the civilised world. Following the course usually adopted when it is desirable to call into existence a fund for a great object of public good, he asks the Lord Mayor, as president of the British section of the exhibition, whether such a fund as would "save our credit in the present deplorable dilemma" could be raised by an appeal emanating from him. To this his Lordship has replied: "The council have not felt justified in applying to the formation of an art section any of the funds received from industrial exhibitors, but they have been able, from another source at their disposal, to promise a contribution of £500 to that purpose, conditionally on the balance being subscribed by the public. From inquiries I find that a sum of about £3,000 will be required to defray the incidental expenses of an art section, and as Sir Frederick Leighton has given emphasis to his letter by a donation of £100, only about £2,400 remains to be collected before such an undertaking can be practically carried into effect. I feel certain that the public will make up this amount."

ST. DUNSTAN'S COLLEGE.—In the presence of the Lord Bishop of Rochester and a numerous and distinguished company, Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Gray yesterday opened the above institution, at Catford Bridge. The college, which has been erected at a cost of £35,000, has been founded under a scheme of the Charity Commissioners out of charitable funds of the parish of St. Dunstan-in-the-East, for the education of 400 boys. Of the forty scholarships which it is proposed shall be maintained three-fourths will be of the yearly value of £20, for day scholars only, and the remainder of £30 each are for boarders only. The governors have further decided to offer eight exhibitions of the value of £50, tenable for not more than four years at any university in the United Kingdom.

INCURABLE.—It has been proved that Electricity, when properly applied, can cure the most obstinate disorders of the nerves, stomach, liver, and kidneys—whether hereditary or acquired. Mr. C. B. Harness (President of the British Association of Medical Electricians) is the only medical electrician in this country whose treatment is recommended by the leading scientific and medical authorities. Numerous so-called "incurable" cases have been sent to him by physicians whose resources have been exhausted, and Mr. Harness's world-famed Electropathic Treatment has speedily restored the patients to perfect health and happiness. The fact can be easily verified by a personal inspection of the multitude of testimonials to be seen at Mr. Harness's Electropathic Establishment, 52, Oxford-st., London, W. (corner of Rathbone-pl.). Note only address, and call or write at once before it is too late. Pamphlet and advice free of charge.—[ADVT.]

FURNISH ON NORMAN AND STACEY'S INSTALMENT SYSTEM.—This simple economical system admitted to be the most satisfactory. 1, 2, or 3 years' credit, with option of purchase at any time. Selections from genuine wholesale manufacturers, who deliver goods free. Deposit not necessary. Personal applications solicited. Offices, 79, Queen Victoria-st., E.C., 121, Pall-mall, S.W.—[ADVT.]

IS MARRIAGE A FAILURE?—No, not if people use Aspinall's Enamel to make their homes bright and beautiful. Wherever a home is bright it is happy. N.B.—Aspinall's Enamel is the only one guaranteed to make marriage a success; imitations will probably make it a worse failure than they themselves are. Aspinall's is sold everywhere, or post free 8d., 1s. 4d., and 3s. For Baths, 1s. 9d. and 3s. 6d. From Works, London, S.E.—[ADVT.]

SALT FOR HORSES.—No stable is complete without the patent Salt Roller, of which the "Field" says: "Gives the animals salt in a most convenient form, avoids the dirt, dust, and other attendant evils of the use of rock salt." Complete, with bracket, 1s. Extra rollers, 6d. each. Of all Saddlers, Ironmongers, Corndealers, Grocers, &c.—Spratt's Patent (Limited), London, S.E.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

NO MORE MEDICINE.—Perfect health restored by Du Barry's delicious Revalenta Arabica Food for invalids, children, and infants, which cures the most disordered stomach and bowels, the blood, the nerves, lungs, liver, brain, voice, and breath. In tins at 2s., 3s. 6d., 6s., 5lb. 14s.—Du Barry and Co. (Limited), 77, Regent-street, W., London, and of all Grocers and Chemists.—[ADVT.]

Sir Morell Mackenzie writes about the Soden Mineral Pastilles: "I regard them as extremely valuable in obstinate catarrhal affections of the throat. They are especially beneficial in catarrhal diseases of the air passages. I frequently found them of great service in the cases of singers and public speakers." Acknowledged by the medical profession the best remedy for throat irritation, coughs, bronchitis, and asthma.—Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., or 15 stamps, from 10, Dyer's-buildings, Holborn.—[ADVT.]

THE TRAGEDIES IN ALDGATE AND WHITECHAPEL.

REWARDS BY THE CITY POLICE, VOLUNTEERS AND CITIZENS.

THE HOME SECRETARY'S REPLY.

Two whole days and nights have passed away in eager search and feverish popular agitation since the bodies of the two women murdered early on Sunday morning were discovered in the respective places where they had fallen victims to the inhuman bloodthirstiness of a ruthless assassin. Not the least clue, however, of any practical value has been obtained to the personality or whereabouts of the miscreant who has committed these appalling crimes; nor has either of the corpses been conclusively identified. An imposing force of policemen and detectives has been told off to guard and watch the district in which these horrors have taken place; but nothing apparently likely to lead to the detection of the criminal has resulted from the measures hitherto taken by the Executive, or from the inquiry instituted into the Berner-street murder by the East Middlesex coroner and jury. A dark opaque cloud of mystery still conceals the guiltiest wretch in London from the sight of the innumerable eyes peering in every direction, night and day, whithersoever it is deemed probable or possible that he may be hidden. The regular, legally-constituted machinery set in motion to the end of discovering the assassin has searched for him, we do not doubt, to the full extent of its powers, and with entire lack of success. The irregular, self-constituted bodies that have undertaken the difficult enterprise of hunting him down have, until now, confined their efforts to protesting against the inactivity of the Home Secretary, and to collecting subscriptions wherewith to get together a substantial money reward for the arrest of the unknown malefactor. Interpreted by the light of Western experiences in the United States, a Vigilance Committee would mean an association of determined citizens, dissatisfied with existing laws, and audaciously disregardful of them. The very title conveys to our mind house visitation, arbitrary arrest, rough and ready justice achieved by all manner of illegal proceedings. What, however, can a London Vigilance Committee be expected to do save to make indignant speeches and sedulously go round with the hat? Were any of its members to attempt to enforce their self-bestowed right of search by entering a private dwelling without its tenant's leave, and subjecting any of its occupants to examination or detention, that Vigilance Committee would assuredly have reason to rue its unstatutory boldness. It would be as idle to hope that the Whitechapel homicide will be brought to light by the action of any number of local so-called "Vigilance Committees" as to look for his discovery to the "unerring instinct" of thoroughbred bloodhounds, "laid on" to a fugitive who has left neither track nor trail behind him, and of whom no one, in or out of authority, possesses the least belonging, or even the faintest material evidence that he exists in the flesh at all. Bloodhounds will follow, by scent, any one they know, or the blood-trail of a person they have never seen, or the foot-track of a negro, whose scent is as strong and distinct to their keen olfactory organs as that of a fox or a deer. They cannot, however, in London streets—betrodden by countless thousands of human beings daily—hunt by nose one of those thousands, be he tenfold a murderer, unless they have a special knowledge of him, or are brought into contact with some article of his clothing, recently worn. Even then, they could only follow him if laid on his track from the spot at which he must have been present to commit his crime, and that immediately after his flight, ere the track could be crossed, and the scent broken, by dozens of casual passengers traversing it at different points.

No; we cannot in the least count upon Vigilance Committees or bloodhounds to unearth the perpetrator of the Whitechapel murders from his lair and bring him to justice, whether of the kind administered by the law of the land or of Judge Lynch. All we can rely upon are the ordinary means of detection and arrest disposed of by the authorities whom we have set over us; and we may be permitted to deplore the fact that, in this horrible emergency, as in many another belonging to the past, they have proved lamentably inefficient. Our Detective Department is utterly unequal to deal with criminals of more than average ingenuity, and is, moreover, fettered by all sorts of restrictions and restraints from which the secret police of other countries is absolutely free. Our Home Secretary is a perverse and stubborn official who, having made up his mind to do nothing whatsoever that may tend towards the discovery of the Whitechapel murderer, sticks to his resolve with immovable stolidity, deaf to argument, exhortation, and persuasion. Large sums of money are forwarded to him that he may be enabled, without drawing upon the State Treasury for a sixpence, to offer a reward in the name of the Government for the arrest of this mysterious woman-slayer, he calmly returns them to their senders, not being "of opinion that the offer of a reward in these cases would have been attended by any useful result." Such is the attitude taken up towards the aggrieved and indignant population of this mighty metropolis by the Minister entrusted by her Majesty with the momentous duty of protecting her loyal subjects' lives and property from attack and injury!

As we have already regretfully observed, nothing new of any grave import transpired in the course of yesterday with relation to the hideous tragedies of Berner-street and Mitre-square. A portion of the apron worn by the unfortunate woman done to death in the latter locality was picked up at a distance therefrom of 500 yards, in the direction of the scene of the first murder. This is an indication that the assassin, after completing his second butchery, retraced his steps for a little more than a third of a mile; but it affords no clue to his subsequent itinerary, for, having dropped the tatter of bloodstained apron within hail of Berner-street, he vanished as completely as though the earth had swallowed him up. Yesterday was a day of rumours and arrests; the rumours all proved unfounded on fact, and the arrested persons, having satisfactorily proved their innocence, were all liberated. The only steps of potential efficacy taken towards plucking out the heart of this ghastly mystery were those due to the Corporation of the City of London, which offers a reward of £500 for "such information as shall lead to the discovery and conviction of the murderer or murderers"; to Colonel Kirby and the officers of the Tower Hamlets Engineers, who have generously subscribed £100 for the same purpose, and have offered the services of fifty of their men to assist the police in the perpecuted district; and to other public-spirited gentlemen, including Mr. Montagu, M.P., who have made up a sum of about £400, also offered as a reward, £300 of which have been tendered as above to Mr. Matthews, and by him rejected. Nearly £1,000 now, therefore, awaits acceptance at the hands of any man or woman who, knowing where the assassin is to be found, will disclose his place of concealment to the authorities; and it may be hoped that so great a temptation will prove irresistible to his accomplices or harbourers, if indeed he stand "within the danger" of any such.

The inquest on the body of the woman slaughtered in Mitre-square will be held in Golden-lane on Thursday next, by Mr. Langham, the City Coroner, and a jury of London citizens.

The Commissioner of the City Police (Colonel Sir James Fraser) has decided to offer a reward of £500 for the detection of the murderer of the woman found in Mitre-square, which is within the City boundaries. This determination was arrived at yesterday, after consultation among the City authorities, and the placards containing the announcement will be immediately issued. It will be remembered that a reward of £300 was offered by Mr. Samuel Montagu, M.P., for the detection of the perpetrator of the Whitechapel outrages. This still remains open, while other sums have been subscribed in the locality. The decision of the City authorities therefore brings the total reward now offered to over £1,000, despite the fact that the Home Secretary has declined to take any steps in the same direction. The terms of the reward offered by the City Police are set forth in the subjoined:

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I beg to enclose you a copy of bills about to be issued, offering a reward of £500 in this case.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

JAS. M'WILLIAM, Inspector.

City of London Police, Detective Department,
26, Old Jewry, E.C., Oct. 1.

"MURDER.—£500 Reward.—Whereas, at 1.45 a.m. on Sunday, Sept. 30 last, a woman, name unknown, was found brutally murdered in Mitre-square, Aldgate, in this City, a reward of £500 will be paid by the Commissioner of Police of the City of London, to any person (other than a person belonging to a police-force in the United Kingdom) who shall give such information as shall lead to the discovery and conviction of the murderer or murderers.

"Information to be given to the Inspector of the Detective Department, 26, Old Jewry, or at any police-station.

"JAMES FRASER, Colonel, Commissioner.
"City of London Police-office, 26, Old Jewry,
Oct. 1."

Colonel Sir Alfred Kirby, J.P., the officer commanding the Tower Hamlets Battalion Royal Engineers, has offered "on behalf of his officers, a reward of £100, to be paid to any one who shall give information that would lead to the discovery and conviction of the perpetrator or perpetrators of the recent diabolical murders committed in the district in which his regiment is situated." Sir Alfred Kirby is also willing to place the services of not more than fifty members of his corps at the disposal of the authorities, to be utilised in assisting them in any way they may consider desirable at this juncture, either for the protection of the public or finding out the criminals. Of course the volunteers will have to be made use of as citizens, and not in a quasi-military capacity.

Acknowledging a letter sent on behalf of persons desirous of offering a reward for the discovery of the perpetrator of the recent East-end murders, the following answer has been received from the Home Secretary:

"Oct. 1, 1888.

"My Dear Sir—I am directed by Mr. Matthews to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this date, containing a cheque for £300, which you say has been contributed on behalf of several readers of the Financial News, and which you are desirous should be offered as a reward for the discovery of the recent murders in the East-end of London.

"If Mr. Matthews had been of opinion that the offer of a reward in these cases would have been attended by any useful result he would himself have at once made such an offer, but he is not of that opinion.

"Under these circumstances I am directed to return you the cheque (which I enclose), and to thank you and the gentlemen whose names you have forwarded for the liberality of their offer, which Mr. Matthews much regrets he is unable to accept.—I am, Sir, your very obedient servant,

"E. LEIGH PEMBERTON.

"Harry H. Marks, Esq."

Mr. L. H. Phillips has given notice that at Thursday's Court of Common Council he will ask that a reward of £250 shall be given to any person who can assist in finding out the perpetrators of the East-end murders.

THE ALDGATE MURDER.

City police detectives, under the direction of Mr. M'William, continued their researches yesterday with a view to the identification of the woman who was found murdered and mutilated in Mitre-square on Sunday, between half-past one a.m. and a quarter to two o'clock. The difficulties which have been experienced have been unusually great. On Sunday, and again yesterday, systematic inquiry was pursued in the common lodging-houses of Spitalfields and Whitechapel. Considerable reluctance was shown by the deputies and others to visit the mortuary in Golden-lane to see the remains. The fact was established that in the East-end of London there are hundreds of degraded women enduring a wretched existence, known to one another by nickname merely. Little attention is paid to their doings, or their comings and goings. If they possess the fourpence they can get a bed at a common lodging-house; if they have not the money they sleep anywhere. As many as thirty in one shed were observed yesterday morning. Such people can disappear from their haunts, and their departure is not noticed. When wanted they cannot be found, and they seem to think more of the "price of a pint" than of any consideration of truth. Nevertheless, under the terror of a common danger these women speak honestly, and are drawn together for the time. As they themselves admit, "their turn may come next;" for they make no secret of their dreadful trade. Yet, for perfectly natural reasons, they will not willingly associate themselves with the investigation of the murders. They have their own theories about them; and they speak freely about the risks they run when they believe themselves to be out of the hearing of strangers, but they resort to their customary prevarication when taxed either by detectives or reporters. They seem to fear that publicity will imperil their own safety. Thus it has been no easy matter to sift the truth of the stories which have been going the round of the kitchens in Whitechapel. Mary Price, of 36, Flower and Dean-street, having seen the body, was of opinion that the woman was a certain Jane Kelly; but subsequent inquiries showed that this person was alive. Then information was obtained from George Smith, 15, Great Pearl-street, that the deceased was called "Phœbe the Jewess," but this was also negatived. It is not unreasonable to suppose that there are scores of women in Whitechapel whose general description might tally with that of the deceased. The City Police had one clue to work upon. A few feet from the spot where the body was discovered in the south-west corner of Mitre-square was picked up a tin box, such as is usually sold full of mustard for a penny. In this box there were two pawntickets, issued by a Spitalfields firm whose shop is near Commercial-street. The first ticket was made out in the name of Jane Kelly, 6, Dorset-street, and dated Sept. 28. It was for a man's pair of boots, which were pawned for 2s 6d. The other ticket had the name Emily Burrell, of 52, White's-row, and it was for a man's flannel shirt, upon which 9d was lent on Aug. 31 last. Reference being made to the pawnbrokers, it was ascertained that the woman who pledged these articles was unknown to them. They could not recollect what she was like. Hundreds of poor women make it a regular rule to pawn their clothing and to redeem it when they can. Further inquiry proved that a Jane Kelly was not known at 6, Dorset-street, and that the address in White's-row was purely fictitious, as there is no such number. Of course there is no actual proof that the box belonged to the deceased, for it might have been dropped by some other woman in the corner of the square where it was found; but if it was deceased's property the fact that she had pledged man's clothing was taken as evidence that, like many others of her class, she had been living with a man. This individual has not at present come forward. Should the pawntickets have been lost by some one, the owner, if living, will probably in the usual course lodge an affidavit with the pawnbroker in order not to forfeit the property. Notification of the loss has not been received, and in the absence of such intimation it may be assumed that the pawntickets really did belong to the woman by whose body they were lying. In support of this idea the following circumstances have been reported to the police: Two women yesterday afternoon, whilst engaged in pledging various articles, were drawn into conversation by a pawnbroker. They stated that they were sure that the body at Golden-lane mortuary was that of a woman known as "Annie," who lived at a shop in a court near to Dorset-street. When asked if they would communicate this belief to the police they refused. A little later the importance of their doing so was urged upon them. They still declined, saying that the shopkeeper would know more of Annie than they did. They could not bear to look upon the mutilated body of a person with whom they had associated. No attempt was made to conceal the fact that they belonged to the same class; and both women expressed a fear that they might be attacked. Shame for their calling they had none; but, on the other hand, they were righteously indignant that their nightly trade should be subjected to such risks. One woman admitted that fair-haired "Annie" had met her late on Saturday night, a couple of hours before the murder, and they had had a drink together in the City-road. Whatever the tale may be worth, partial corroboration was obtained from other sources, and it seems clear that, by common consent of women of her rank in Spitalfields, the dead woman at the mortuary in Golden-lane is regarded as none other than the missing Annie. Nevertheless, no one will come forward to testify to that belief, or to view the body so as to negative it, if wrong.

Inquiry into the incident above related was delayed somewhat by an extraordinary coincidence. In the afternoon Inspector Collard, at Bishopsgate-street Station, who has charge of the clothes of the deceased, conducted a respectable woman, her son-in-law, and another to the mortuary in Golden-lane. These people, who came from Rotherhithe, had observed in the papers that the letters "T. C." were tattooed upon the left forearm of the deceased in blue ink, and they had arrived at the conclusion that it was that of a relative. The woman for many years had lost sight of a sister, who was living, she understood, with a man named Kelly, in a street leading from Bishopsgate. This sister had had "T. C." tattooed upon her arm by her husband, whose initials they were. Kelly was the name, it will be remembered, which figured on one of the pawntickets supposed to belong to the deceased. Thus, when all three witnesses, upon viewing the body, appeared to recognise the features, the detectives thought that they had obtained a clue to identification; but their next step was to escort the party of three persons from Rotherhithe to the address which their relative had last given them. There Sergeant Outram discovered that the woman was alive and well. The "identification," therefore, fell to the ground.

LOCALITY OF THE SIX MURDERS.

The above chart represents the locality within which, since April last, six women of the unfortunate class have been murdered. The precise spot where each crime was committed is indicated by a dagger and a numeral:

1. April 3.—Emma Elizabeth Smith, forty-five, had a stake or iron instrument thrust through her body, near Osborn-street, Whitechapel.
2. Aug. 7.—Martha Tabram, thirty-five, stabbed in thirty-nine places, at George-yard-buildings, Commercial-street, Spitalfields.
3. Aug. 31.—Mary Ann Nicholls, forty-seven, had her throat cut and body mutilated, in Buck's-row, Whitechapel.
4. Sept. 8.—Annie Chapman, forty-seven, her throat cut and body mutilated, in Hanbury-street, Spitalfields.
5. Sept. 30.—A woman, supposed to be Elizabeth Stride, but not yet identified, discovered with her throat cut, in Berner-street, Whitechapel.
6. Sept. 30.—A woman, unknown, found with her throat cut and body mutilated in Mitre-square, Aldgate.

Figure 7 (encircled) marks the spot in Goulston-street where a portion of an apron belonging to the woman murdered in Mitre-square was yesterday picked up by a Metropolitan police-constable.

As throwing a light upon the movements of the murderer after he quitted Mitre-square, an important piece of evidence was obtained yesterday. When the body was examined there was a piece of white coarse apron still attached to it. The missing portion was discovered yesterday in Goulston-street by a policeman in the Metropolitan force. In the opinion of the doctors who compared the two parts there is no room for doubt that they had formed one apron. It is assumed from certain bloodstains upon the portion which was torn away that the murderer had taken it for the purpose of wiping his hands upon it, and had thrown it aside when at some distance from the scene of the crime. The measurement from Goulston-street to Mitre-square is 1,550 feet. Two routes would have been open to him—one by Duke-street, and thence via Aldgate and Whitechapel High-street, which is the open thoroughfare; and the other route, of a more secluded character, lies across Duke-street, along Gravel-lane, Stoney-lane, and New Goulston-street. Either route is based on the assumption that the man made his exit from Mitre-square by Church-passage. There are circumstances, however, which indicate that he may have passed into Mitre-street, without crossing the square. On the doorway and window of one of the houses there have been noticed stains, believed to be of blood, and the inference is that some one had wiped his fingers on the window-ledge, and drawn a blood-stained knife down a part of the doorway. The other point is contained in the statement of Frank Radway, horsekeeper to Mr. Bull, livery stableman, whose office abuts upon Church-passage. The entrance to the stables is in Duke-street. Hansom cabs are let out, and Radway says that the last to get back on Sunday morning arrived at twenty minutes to one a.m. Immediately he put the horse up, and then, in three or four minutes, went to the gates, intending to close them. According to his custom he lingered there for fully a quarter of an hour, and did not go to bed before two o'clock. Thus, during the whole time that the murder was being enacted in the adjacent square Radway was looking up and down Duke-street. He saw neither man nor woman pass, and no one came out of the passage. When he retired to his room, which overlooks the passage, his attention was attracted by no sound; but he also failed to notice the noise subsequently caused by the police in removing the body. There is another singular circumstance. The Aldgate post-office backs upon the rear of some newly-erected and untenanted warehouses in Duke-street. On Saturday evening at half-past eight o'clock everything was safe, and the premises were locked up. Yesterday morning at eight o'clock, when the staff resumed duty, it was discovered that either on Saturday night, or Sunday night, burglars had effected an entrance and broke open the tills, from which they took stamps of all values, from ½d to 10s, to the total amount of £200, besides £50 in cash. The cellar lights of the warehouses in Duke-street were broken, and it was in this way that the thieves obtained access. Then they scaled the roofs, and got through a trap in the upper part of the post-office. They crept downstairs, and in order to avoid being seen through the windows opening into the street they judged it necessary to work their way to the apartment where the safe was placed in a roundabout manner. They pulled up a part of the staircase, and went through the cellar. Apparently they were engaged several hours upon the place, as they had to force open some drawers. Before going away with their booty they carefully washed their hands. In its connection with the investigation of the murder near at hand, the fact that the post-office was entered by way of the insecure premises in Duke-street shows that the burglary must have been committed on Saturday night, for throughout Sunday the street was thronged with people.

It was reported to the City police that a knife had been found by Metropolitan officers in Whitechapel; but no particulars are forthcoming. The weapon is said to be black-handled, with a keen blade ten inches long, pointed as a carver.

A belief is gaining ground that the murderer is not a frequenter of common lodging-houses, but he occupies a single room, or perhaps finds refuge in an empty warehouse. He is supposed to make his home somewhere between Middlesex-street and Brick-lane.

The inquest upon the body of the woman found in Mitre-square will be held by Mr. S. F. Langham, the City Coroner, at the Court in Golden-lane, on Thursday.

THE WHITECHAPEL CRIME.

So far as the identity of the criminal who committed the murder in the courtyard of the International Working Men's Constitutional Club is concerned, the Whitechapel mystery remains in exactly the same state as on Sunday. Detectives have been drafted into the district from Scotland-yard, and additional constables from other divisions of the metropolitan area sent to augment the numbers in the East-end, but neither the old nor the new men have been able to elucidate a single fact likely to direct them to a capture of importance. In lieu of this, they have been able to arrest several persons of more or less suspicious appearance, who, after due examination, have given such explanations of their antecedents and occupations as to satisfy the officers that they have had nothing to do with the outrages. Detective-Inspector Reid, who has charge of the case, has had a great deal of information volunteered to him by women of the class to which the victims belonged regarding men whom they allege to have threatened them with death. Each informant is firmly convinced that the man she saw was the Unknown, who is now so keenly searched for, but as the description varies in each case it is quite plain that they cannot refer to the same person. According to one he is a thick-set, close-shaven man, with a short coat and dark trousers; another states that he is a pretty tall man, with short dark whiskers and beard; a third speaks of him as shortish, with light whiskers; sometimes he wears a dark ulster, and at others a checked one; now he is well-dressed, and again shabby-genteel; and altogether the descriptions given are so confusing that they afford no guide to any officer. It would seem that in Whitechapel, Stepney, and Spitalfields there are several petty ruffians who levy blackmail upon these women under threats of mutilation, and, after parting with any sum they may possess, the wretched females tell either a constable or some of their neighbours that they have had a narrow escape from the murderer, and give a description of him. Fragmentary stories of this kind form the major portion of the information the police have to work up, the criminal himself having left nothing behind to assist in his identification. Up to the present about half-a-dozen people have been arrested and released. As we intimated yesterday, the man who was questioned in a Southwark lodging-house on Sunday was not even taken into custody. Early yesterday morning a constable noticed a stranger in Commercial-road whose appearance and evident desire to avoid notice was suspicious. The constable spoke to him, and receiving what he deemed unsatisfactory answers, took the person to Leman-street Police-station, where he gave his name and address, and furnished ample particulars about himself. These were found to be accurate, and he was accordingly released. Another man was apprehended at Norwood, the incriminating symptoms about him being several scratches on his face, but these he accounted for domestically, and he also was released from suspicion. It is stated that two men were arrested early yesterday near the Commercial-road, but their detention was only temporary, their explanations exonerating them from any suspicion of complicity in the crime. In addition to these a man was, later in the day, brought to the Leman-street Police-station by a constable who found him prowling about not far from Mitre-street. His face was haggard, and he seemed unable to give any account of himself. Upon him were found 1s 4½d in money and a razor, and round his throat was a woollen scarf of a violet colour, upon which were several long hairs, supposed to be those of a woman. At the station he said, in reply to the inspector, that he had walked from Southampton, and belonged to the Royal Sussex Regiment. An examination of his boots was not confirmatory of his statement about his travels, and he was detained that inquiries might be made. No blood was found upon his clothes, nor any weapon likely to have inflicted the wounds. No importance is attached to this arrest, and the man has since been liberated. The only curious thing about this incident is that the mark of the Royal Sussex Regiment, to which he said he belonged, was upon the torn envelope found on the body of the Hanbury-street victim, Annie Chapman. Still another arrest was made of a remarkable character. In consequence of these East-end crimes a reporter in Bow determined to play the part of an amateur detective, and he accordingly dressed himself in female attire of a shabby material, in order to look as much as possible like one of the creatures whom the Unknown selects for vengeance. Thus habited, he left his home at midnight. After loitering about shady streets for some hours, and passing wayfarers and detectives without drawing upon himself their particular observation, he made his way into Whitechapel. Here his masculine stride attracted the notice of Police-constable Ludwig, who accosted him with the words, "Stop. Are you not a man? I can see that you are." The amateur detective admitted that he was, and the constable then asked, "Are you one of us?" The masquerader replied that he had no connection whatever with Scotland-yard, and attempted to explain that he had assumed the disguise in his search for news of the murder. Police-constable Ludwig informed him that he would have to go with him to the police-station, and make that explanation to a superior officer. The two accordingly walked together to Leman-street Police-station, where the reporter unfolded his plot to the inspector, who replied that, under the peculiar circumstances, he was sorry he would have to detain him until inquiries were made. A real detective was put upon the antecedents of the amateur one, and as the explanations of the latter were found to be authentic, he was, after an hour and a half's detention, released to resume his proper habiliments. These completed the arrests of yesterday, and, as stated at the outset, they leave the mystery exactly where it was on Sunday.

Mr. Thomas Ryan, who has charge of the cabmen's reading-room and shelter in Westbourne-grove, relates a story of a man who made a mysterious statement to him on Sunday afternoon. According to this narrative a street attendant brought a man to the shelter about four o'clock in the afternoon and said, "This 'ere gentleman wants a chop, guv'nor; can you cook one for him. He says he's 'most perished with cold." Mr. Ryan replied, "Certainly, I will cook you one with pleasure. Come in." The man accordingly entered and sat down. He was about 5ft 6in in height, wore an Oxford cap and a light check ulster with a tippet, which he did not loosen all the time. He had a thick moustache, but no beard, had clean white hands, was round-headed, his eyes very restless, and he seemed to have been drinking. Several cabmen were in the shelter at the time, talking of the murders discovered that morning at Whitechapel. Ryan exclaimed, "I'd gladly give a good deal if I could only find the fellow who did them." The stranger, looking into Ryan's face, quietly replied "Don't you know who committed the murders? I did them. I've had a lot of trouble lately. I came back from India and got into trouble at once. I lost my watch and chain and £10." Mr. Ryan and the other persons present were much surprised at this statement, but as the man appeared to be under the influence of liquor they did not pay much attention to it, more especially as he produced a bottle, apparently of brandy, out of his pocket and offered them a drink. Mr. Ryan told him they were all teetotallers there, and got him to sign a temperance pledge. He signed the book as "J. Duncan; doctor; residence, Cabman's Shelter; Sept. 30, 1888." After doing this he said, "I could tell a tale if I wanted," and relapsed into semi-somnolence. Mr. Ryan called his attention to the fact that he had not filled in his proper residence, and the man replied, "I have no fixed place of abode at present. I'm living anywhere." After eating his chop and again offering the company a drink he disappeared, and has not since been heard of.

From different parts of London come stories of a similar character, though not so detailed. Several people have stated to the police that while in this or that public-house they heard a man declare that he was the Whitechapel criminal, but as this was invariably done under the influence of drink, and the person was always allowed to walk off before the confession appeared to strike the hearers as remarkable, little reliance can be placed on these tales. Among this kind of evidence must be classed the finding of an old pair of trousers, done up in a brown paper parcel, in an outbuilding in Kentish Town. The package was deemed to be similar to that carried by a man in whose company the Berner-street victim is supposed to have been seen in the course of Saturday night, but so little was the parcel or the trousers thought of that they were kicked into the roadway and afterwards carried away—or, at least, the trousers were—by an old beggar-man. It is alleged that some stains like blood were found on the paper covering, but their colour is doubtful. When the trousers had disappeared, the police were informed of the "find," and detectives are now searching for the man who carried off the ragged garments in case they should be of any use as a clue.

In the neighbourhood of Berner-street the excitement of the inhabitants continues unabated, and during the whole of yesterday a large number of spectators took delight in gazing at the premises of the International Working Man's Constitutional Club, whose committee are making profit out of the notoriety the premises have acquired by charging curiosity-hunters a small sum for admission, the money thus obtained being devoted to the "propaganda fund" of Socialism. As all material traces of the tragedy have been removed, there is nothing to be seen, but many people seemed unsatisfied unless they were shown the exact spot where the body was found, and retold the story of the discovery of the ghastly object as it was narrated before the coroner. Notwithstanding the excitement which the occurrences have created, they have made no difference in the appearance of the streets of Whitechapel, except that there are more constables about than usual. The thoroughfares are as crowded as ever, even up to a late hour, and the same class of people as Annie Chapman and Elizabeth Stride can be seen flitting about the dark and ill-lighted alleys which abound in the district. As to the last-named person—who was found at Berner-street—there is some doubt as to her identification. It is believed that she is the woman known as Elizabeth Stride, or more familiarly as "Long Liz," but this identity is not definitely established. The people who saw her in the lodging-house in Flower and Dean-street, Commercial-road, say there is no doubt she is Elizabeth, but relatives have not been found to identify her. Those who knew her state that she was a good-tempered, harmless woman, who sometimes worked as a charwoman, and only went out when she could find no employment. As indicating the intensity of the feeling of the inhabitants of Whitechapel it may be mentioned that when the police arrest any man, for no matter what offence, the cry is at once raised that he is the "Whitechapel murderer," and an immense crowd at once gathers around the supposed miscreant, hooting and jeering. The Vigilance Committee have again written to the Home Secretary, requesting him to offer a reward, and it has been arranged to hold an indignation meeting of the residents, at which it is expected Mr. Montagu, M.P., will preside.

TUESDAY MORNING (1.30 A.M.)

Upon inquiry at Scotland Yard and at the City Police Office this morning, it was stated that no additional information had been obtained, and that no further arrests were made. The bodies of the victims remain unidentified.

THE INQUEST.

Yesterday, at the Vestry Hall in Cable-street, St. George-in-the-East, Mr. Wynne E. Baxter, coroner for East Middlesex, opened an inquest on the body of the woman who was found dead, with her throat cut, at one o'clock on Sunday morning, in Berner-street, Commercial-road East. At the outset of the inquiry the deceased was described as Elizabeth Stride, but it subsequently transpired that she had not yet been really identified. A jury of twenty-four having been empanelled, they proceeded to view the body at the St. George's Mortuary.

Detective-Inspector Reid, H Division, watched the case on behalf of the police.

William Wess, who affirmed instead of being sworn, was the first witness examined, and, in reply to the coroner, he said: I reside at No. 2, William-street, Cannon-street-road, and am overseer in the printing office attached to No. 40, Berner-street, Commercial-road, which premises are in the occupation of the International Working Men's Education Society, whose club is carried on there. On the ground floor of the club is a room, the door and window of which face the street. At the rear of this is the kitchen, whilst the first floor consists of a large room which is used for our meetings and entertainments, I being a member of the club. At the south side of the premises is a courtyard, to which entrance can be obtained through a double door, in one section of which is a smaller one, which is used when the larger barriers are closed. The large doors are generally closed at night, but sometimes remain open. On the left side of the yard is a house, which is divided into three tenements, and occupied, I believe, by that number of families. At the end is a store or workshop belonging to Messrs. Hindley and Co., sack manufacturers. I do not know that a way out exists there. The club premises and the printing-office occupy the entire length of the yard on the right side. Returning to the club-house, the front room on the ground floor is used for meals. In the kitchen is a window which faces the door opening into the yard. The intervening passage is illuminated by means of a fanlight over the door. The printing-office, which does not communicate with the club, consists of two rooms, one for compositors and the other for the editor. On Saturday the compositors finished their labours at two o'clock in the afternoon. The editor concluded earlier, but remained at the place until the discovery of the murder.

How many members are there in the club?—From seventy-five to eighty. Working men of any nationality can join.

Is any political qualification required of members?—It is a political—a Socialist—club.

Do the members have to agree with any particular principles?—A candidate is proposed by one member and seconded by another, and a member would not nominate a candidate unless he knew that he was a supporter of Socialist principles. On Saturday last I was in the printing-office during the day and in the club during the evening. From nine to half-past ten at night I was away seeing an English friend home, but I was in the club again till a quarter-past midnight. A discussion was proceeding in the lecture-room, which has three windows overlooking the yard. From ninety to 100 persons attended the discussion, which terminated soon after half-past eleven, when the bulk of the members left, using the street door, the most convenient exit. From twenty to thirty members remained, some staying in the lecture-room and the others going downstairs. Of those upstairs a few continued the discussion, while the rest were singing. The windows of the lecture-room were partly open.

How do you know that you finally left at a quarter-past twelve o'clock?—Because of the time when I reached my lodgings. Before leaving I went into the yard, and thence to the printing-office, in order to leave some literature there, and on returning to the yard I observed that the double door at the entrance was open. There is no lamp in the yard, and none of the street lamps light it, so that the yard is only lit by the lights through the windows at the side of the club and of the tenements opposite. As to the tenements, I only observed lights in two first-floor windows. There was also a light in the printing-office, the editor being in his room reading.

Was there much noise in the club?—Not exactly much noise; but I could hear the singing when I was in the yard.

Did you look towards the yard gates?—Not so much to the gates as to the ground, but nothing unusual attracted my attention.

Can you say that there was no object on the ground?—I could not say that.

Do you think it possible that anything can have been there without your observing it?—It was dark, and I am a little shortsighted, so that it is possible. The distance from the gates to the kitchen door is 18ft.

What made you look towards the gates at all?—Simply because they were open. I went into the club, and called my brother, and we left together by the front door.

On leaving did you see anybody as you passed the yard?—No.

Or did you meet any one in the street?—Not that I recollect. I generally go home between twelve and one o'clock.

Do low women frequent Berner-street?—I have seen men and women standing about and talking to each other in Fairclough-street.

But have you observed them nearer the club?—No.

Or in the club yard?—I did once, at eleven o'clock at night, about a year ago. They were chatting near the gates. That is the only time I have noticed such a thing, nor have I heard of it.

Morris Eagle, who also affirmed, said: I live at No. 4, New-road, Commercial-road, and travel in jewellery. I am a member of the International Workmen's Club, which meets at 40, Berner-street. I was there on Saturday, several times during the day, and was in the chair during the discussion in the evening. After the discussion, between half-past eleven and a quarter to twelve o'clock, I left the club to take my young lady home, going out through the front door. I returned about twenty minutes to one. I tried the front door, but, finding it closed, I went through the gateway into the yard, reaching the club in that way.

Did you notice anything lying on the ground near the gates?—I did not.

Did you pass in the middle of the gateway?—I think so. The gateway is 9ft 2in wide. I naturally walked on the right side, that being the side on which the club door was.

Do you think you are able to say that the deceased was not lying there then?—I do not know, I am sure, because it was rather dark. There was a light from the upper part of the club, but that would not throw any illumination upon the ground. It was dark near the gates.

You have formed no opinion, I take it, then, as to whether there was anything there?—No.

Did you see anyone about in Berner-street?—I dare say I did, but I do not remember them.

Did you observe any one in the yard?—I do not remember that I did.

If there had been a man and woman there you would have remembered the circumstance?—Yes; I am sure of that.

Did you notice whether there were any lights in the tenements opposite the club?—I do not recollect.

Are you often at the club late at night?—Yes, very often.

In the yard, too?—No, not in the yard.

And you have never seen a man and woman there?—No, not in the yard; but I have close by, outside the beershop, at the corner of Fairclough-street. As soon as I entered the gateway on Saturday night I could hear a friend of mine singing in the upstair room of the club. I went up to him. He was singing in the Russian language, and we sang together. I had been there twenty minutes when a member named Gidleman came upstairs, and said "there is a woman dead in the yard." I went down in a second and struck a match, when I saw a woman lying on the ground in a pool of blood, near the gates. Her feet were towards the gates, about six or seven feet from them. She was lying by the side of and facing the club wall. When I reached the body and struck the match another member was present.

Did you touch the body?—No. As soon as I struck the match I perceived a lot of blood, and I ran away and called the police.

Were the clothes of the deceased disturbed?—I cannot say. I ran towards the Commercial-road, Dienishitz, the club steward, and another member going in the opposite direction down Fairclough-street. In Commercial-road I found two constables at the corner of Grove-street. I told them that a woman had been murdered in Berner-street, and they returned with me.

Was any one in the yard then?—Yes, a few persons—some members of the club and some strangers. One of the policemen turned his lamp on the deceased and sent me to the station for the inspector, at the same time telling his comrade to fetch a doctor. The onlookers seemed afraid to go near and touch the body. The constable, however, felt it.

Can you fix the time when the discovery was first made?—It must have been about one o'clock. On Saturday nights there is free discussion at the club, and among those present last Saturday were about half a dozen women, but they were those we know—not strangers. It was not a dancing night, but a few members may have danced after the discussion.

If there was dancing and singing in the club you would not hear the cry of a woman in the yard?—It would depend upon the cry.

The cry of a woman in great distress—a cry of "Murder"?—Yes, I should have heard that.

Lewis Dienishitz, having affirmed, deposed: I reside at No. 40, Berner-street, and am steward of the International Workmen's Club. I am married, and my wife lives at the club too, and assists in the management. On Saturday I left home about half-past eleven in the morning, and returned exactly at one o'clock on Sunday morning. I noticed the time at the baker's shop at the corner of Berner-street. I had been to the market near the Crystal Palace, and had a barrow like a costermonger's, drawn by a pony, which I keep in George-yard, Cable-street. I drove home to leave my goods. I drove into the yard, both gates being wide open. It was rather dark there. All at once my pony shied at some object on the right. I looked to see what the object was, and observed that there was something unusual, but could not tell what. It was a dark object. I put my whip handle to it, and tried to lift it up, but as I did not succeed I jumped down from my barrow and struck a match. It was rather windy, and I could only get sufficient light to see that there was some figure there. I could tell from the dress that it was the figure of a woman.

You did not disturb it?—No. I went into the club and asked where my wife was. I found her in the front room on the ground floor.

What did you do with the pony?—I left it in the yard by itself, just outside the club door. There were several members in the front room of the club, and I told them all that there was a woman lying in the yard, though I could not say whether she was drunk or dead. I then got a candle and went into the yard, where I could see blood before I reached the body.

Did you touch the body?—No, I ran off at once for the police. I could not find a constable in the direction which I took, so I shouted out "Police!" as loudly as I could. A man whom I met in Grove-street returned with me, and when we reached the yard he took hold of the head of the deceased. As he lifted it up I saw the wound in the throat.

Had the constables arrived then?—At the very same moment Eagle and the constables arrived.

Did you notice anything unusual when you were approaching the club?—No.

You saw nothing suspicious?—Not at all.

How soon afterwards did a doctor arrive?—About twenty minutes after the constables came up. No one was allowed by the police to leave the club until they were searched, and then they had to give their names and addresses.

Did you notice whether the clothes of the deceased were in order?—They were in perfect order.

How was she lying?—On her left side, with her face towards the club wall.

Was the whole of the body resting on the side?—No, I should say only her face. I cannot say how much of the body was sideways. I did not notice what position her hands were in, but when the police came I observed that her bodice was unbuttoned near the neck. The doctor said the body was quite warm.

What quantity of blood should you think had flowed from the body?—I should say quite two quarts.

In what direction had it run?—Up the yard from the street. The body was about one foot from the club wall. The gutter of the yard is paved with large stones, and the centre with smaller irregular stones.

Have you ever seen men and women together in the yard?—Never.

Nor heard of such a thing?—No.

A Juror: Could you in going up the yard have passed the body without touching it?—Oh, yes.

Any person going up the centre of the yard might have passed without noticing it?—I, perhaps, should not have noticed it if my pony had not shied. I had passed it when I got down from my barrow.

How far did the blood run?—As far as the kitchen door of the club.

Was any person left with the body while you ran for the police?—Some members of the club remained; at all events, when I came back they were there. I cannot say whether any of them touched the body.

Inspector Reid (interposing): When the murder was discovered the members of the club were detained on the premises, and I searched them, whilst Dr. Phillips examined them.

A Juror: Was it possible for anybody to leave the yard between the discovery of the body and the arrival of the police?

Witness: Oh, yes—or, rather, it would have been possible before I informed the members of the club, not afterwards.

When you entered the yard, if any person had run out you would have seen them in the dark?—Oh, yes, it was light enough for that. It was dark in the gateway, but not so dark further in the yard.

The Coroner: The body has not yet been identified?—Not yet.

The Foreman: I do not quite understand that. I thought the inquest had been opened on the body of one Elizabeth Stride.

The Coroner: That was a mistake. Something is known of the deceased, but she has not been fully identified. It would be better at present to describe her as a woman unknown. She has been partially identified. It is known where she lived. It was thought at the beginning of the inquest that she had been identified by a relative, but that turns out to have been a mistake.

The inquiry was then adjourned till this (Tuesday) afternoon, at two o'clock.

LETTERS FROM THE PUBLIC.

We have received a large number of letters, from all parts of the kingdom, indicating the widespread and intense interest which has been aroused by these unparalleled crimes. Our correspondents belong to all sorts and conditions of people. Their suggestions are interesting, if not important. Several gentlemen of the medical profession express regret that in the case of the woman Chapman the coroner should have been led astray, "intentionally or otherwise," as to the object for which the crime was said to have been committed. "The alleged value of £20 in such a case," writes "A Surgeon," "is a gross exaggeration, and it is also a shameful thing that a public officer should have been, I fear purposely, misled upon so serious and painful a subject." "Citizen," "St. John Carr," "A Scotchman," and others advise the police to avail themselves of the aid of bloodhounds, and "Citizen" is convinced that "had a good dog been put on the scent in either case at the moment of the discovery of the bodies, the criminal would have been hunted down." Many correspondents who write from the East-end, including "One More Unfortunate," "A Mariner," and "One Who Knows," believe in a searching and efficient register of strangers, and "in every person being compelled to give an account of himself at common and other lodging-houses." Quite a little army of "Special Constables" offer their services in patrolling the East-end and in assisting at a house-to-house investigation of any district at some given moment, "more particularly," says "One of the X Division," "in the event of another murder, which we may surely expect after such successful daring and such an appetite for blood." "A. E. Gower," "W. S." (Derby), and "H. C. W." think the police should patrol their beats silently with the aid of "rubber boots," and "A Surgeon" (T. L.) calls our attention to the fact that "the Sheffield police are supplied with boots not only waterproof, but soft in the sole, which make no noise, and are cheap and durable." Much indignation is expressed against "the action, or want of action" (as "D. C. L." expresses it) of the Home Secretary, "in regard to whose strange apathy" "A Poor Woman" asks, "Does this unpopular but powerful Minister think that because the victims belong to the class termed unfortunate they are of no account? What would he have done if the poor creatures had been rich and titled dames of the West-end"? "Spes" advises the police "to look for the murderer in an empty house where a caretaker is not likely to be suspected of harbouring him." "An Old Detective" says "if the man is taken he will be taken red-handed. The assistance of the class of woman he attacks would be useful, and a clever officer in woman's clothes is an idea which has probably been acted upon." We select from some hundreds of other letters the following for publication:

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—With regard to the recent murders, will you kindly allow me a little of your space to urge upon Mr. Matthews the desirability of, even thus late in the day, issuing a Government notification, and for reasons which hitherto I have not seen advanced? Private rewards are all very well so far as they go; but they must be deficient in one particular, which the Crown alone can supply. When rewards were offered for the discovery of a murderer their character was twofold—the money and the promise of a pardon to any accomplice not the actual murderer. The objection to a money reward, that it often went into wrong hands, is tantamount to an assertion that the promise of pardon was in some cases, at least, the inducement to people to give information; and in the present case such a promise might have that effect.

Without attempting to go over the whole of the ground which the promise of pardon to accomplices would cover, I may point out that it is difficult to suppose, even if different hands have committed each of the murders, and taking the case of Annie Chapman alone, that there is not some one who has a well-founded suspicion of the murderer of that ill-fated creature. If he lives in the neighbourhood of the deed he would return home to a waking neighbourhood, if at a distance he would still return to a waking one; and it is almost incredible he should be living such an isolated life that there is not a human being who has some knowledge of his blood-stained hands, and, probably, his blood-stained features and garments, and of the steps he has taken to hide the traces of his guilt. But, if two or more of the murders have been committed by the same person, the supposition of complete ignorance or suspicion of the murderer becomes still more untenable. Why, then, has no information been given? I say simply because, in the first place, there was some one, relying upon the accumulation of horrors, who waited for a Government reward, offered in the usual terms, and who dares not give now the information which three weeks ago his cupidity induced him to withhold. Maybe there is someone who has lodged and fed and clothed the murderer, intending to hand him over to justice as soon as he could do so with profit and impunity to himself. By so harbouring the criminal any such person has rendered himself liable to severe penalties, which no doubt he richly deserves, as an accomplice after the fact; by his own conduct he has placed a seal upon his lips, and unless the Government remove that seal a secret of incalculable value may perhaps be carried to the grave. That such a secret is in existence I submit is very probable.

I therefore urge upon the Home Secretary to notify the promise of pardon to any accomplices in one or more of these murders in the usual terms. Further, there is this to be said in favour of such pardon—if money rewards have a tendency to get into wrong hands, it is possible for a pardon only to reach the right ones.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

G. R. H.

London, Sept. 28.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—As it is necessary that something out of the ordinary must be done to capture the being who perpetrates these awful deeds, I venture to send the following proposition, in the hope that it may be of some use, or that some more useful suggestion may be gained through it.

For instance, say that a square mile, or any distance that would cover the worst parts of the neighbourhood, where the lowest classes live, and where these crimes have been committed, were divided into so many temporary stations, where an inspector and constable could be, and that every man sleeping in this specified area should be compelled, before going to his bed, to report himself, or not be allowed to enter his lodging until he could show that he had done so. Of course this would mean a great number of police to strictly enforce the regulation.—I am, yours truly,

G. E. K.

Rivermere, Old Windsor, Oct. 1.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—In the face of the half-dozen murders that have recently taken place in our midst without the slightest clue of any importance having been obtained by our detectives or police, it forcibly strikes one there must be a very weak point in our detective department which requires instant remedy. At the present time a man is required to be a certain height and to serve for a definite time as a constable before he is eligible as a detective, during which time he, of course, becomes well known, besides which this arrangement only opens our detective department to one class of men, whereas every class ought to be represented to properly carry out the work.

I should propose that anybody offering himself should be accepted, providing his references were satisfactory and he had a good knowledge of London, trained privately for a certain period, and when efficient he should be entrusted with the class of cases he seemed to show most aptitude for. In this way we should have many men of high education and varied experience only too glad to join the force from a love of the calling, who at the present time are debarred by the useless regulations regarding admission now in force.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,

F. W. DEVEREUX LONG.

31, Finsbury-square, and Houndsditch, Oct. 1.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—After the awful details of the two murders recorded in the papers, which occurred on Saturday night, surely some stronger measures should be taken to ensure no repetitions of such atrocities which are outrages on civilisation. These horrible mutilating murders may, and probably will go on for some length of time, as there seems to be no possible clue in any of the cases. What I should suggest would be that after dark in certain parts of London every policeman ought to have the right of stopping and searching anyone, to see if he carries a knife such as must have been used in all these hideous crimes. Surely no innocent man would object to this ordeal, and it might have the desired effect of bringing the guilty one to justice, or at any rate checking any further outrage of the kind. I do not know how far the authority of Sir Charles Warren goes, as head of the police, but in such a case surely additional power might be obtained from the Home Office.—Believe me, yours truly,

C. L. M.

Connaught-square, Hyde Park, W., Oct. 1.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Reading the account given by Morris the watchman, he remarks, "The strangest part of the whole thing is that I heard no sound. As a rule, I can hear the footsteps of the policeman as he passes by every quarter of an hour." Quite so, and so could any person whose intentions were evil. I have had many years experience in the City at night time, and have often noticed that a policeman's step could be heard a great distance, even from one end of a street to the other. The thought suggested is whether it would not be wise that policemen should be provided with a more noiseless material than iron and leather, especially when on night duty.—Yours truly,

D. EVERETT.

A meeting of the Whitechapel District Board of Works was held last evening, Mr. Robert Gladding presiding.

MR. CATMUR said he thought that the board, as the local authority, should express their abhorrence of the crimes which had been perpetrated in the district, and that, although it was not in their province to suggest anything, it would be right that they should address the authorities really responsible. Proceeding, Mr. Catmur spoke of the evil effect which had resulted to the district in the loss of trade. Evening business had become practically extinct in many trades, women finding themselves unable to pass through the streets without an escort. Moreover, the inefficiency of the police was shown in the striking circumstance that but an hour or two later than the murders in Berner-street and Mitre-square the post-office in the immediate vicinity was broken into and property of the value of £100 taken from it.

MR. NICHOLSON pointed out that while the local authority might not be responsible for the efficiency of the police, they were responsible for the proper lighting of the district. In one instance, which he mentioned, a court had been absolutely without light for nearly a week.

MR. ABRAHAMS observed that he could not agree with the wholesale condemnation of the police, nor with any resolution which did not indicate a means of reform. He could, however, vouch, from his own personal experience, that the effect of these murders had been most injurious to business in Whitechapel; indeed, it was the most disastrous blow to the trade of the district that he had known in his experience of a quarter of a century.

The REV. DANIEL GREATOREX said the emigrants' houses of call were feeling the panic to such an extent that emigrants refused to locate themselves in Whitechapel even temporarily. The new system of police, whereby constables were frequently changed from one district to another, kept the policemen ignorant of their beats. This was one great cause of police inefficiency, and the inspectors themselves testified that what he said was correct. In days gone by constables were acquainted not only with the streets in their district, but also with all the houses.

The CHAIRMAN remarked that local bodies had no responsibility in these matters, as the management of the police had been taken away from them.

MR. CARAMELLI thought the change in the condition of Whitechapel in recent years would suggest an entire revision of the police arrangements. Whitechapel was now a place for the residuum of the whole country and the Continent as well, but it was not so a generation ago.

After further discussion the following resolution was carried, on the motion of MR. CATMUR, seconded by MR. BARHAM: "That this board regards with horror and alarm the several atrocious murders recently perpetrated within the district of Whitechapel and its vicinity, and calls upon Sir Charles Warren so to locate and strengthen the police force in the neighbourhood as to guard against any repetition of such atrocities; and that the Home Secretary be addressed in the same terms."

At Worship-street Police-court yesterday, among the night charges were some ten or a dozen prisoners arraigned for loitering and disorderly conduct, and in the course of the hearing of one case, against a man who was accused of assaulting Police-constable 337 H—the officer proved that at about three o'clock on Sunday morning the prisoner was loitering about in Commercial-street, Spitalfields. He was singing, and when spoken to knocked the officer down. The magistrate (Mr. Montagu Williams, Q.C.) said that if ever there was a time at which he was inclined to deal severely with men who assaulted the police it was the present. The police had not merely to walk their beats, but to have eyes and ears for every one found about the streets at such hours. The present state of affairs was too horrible to continue, and the police must be supported in putting an end to it. He (the magistrate) would not allow a fine for assault on the police, and he sentenced the prisoner to fourteen days' hard labour.

Yesterday at Marylebone Police-court, a man, evidently of the artisan class, applied to Mr. De Rutzen for process against a gentleman living at Tottenham, for injury he had sustained through being arrested on suspicion of being the perpetrator of the Whitechapel murder. He had been helping in the repair of the organ at St. Saviour's Church, Warwick-road, Paddington, and was on his way home, when the person against whom he was applying said he (applicant) was "Leather Apron," and gave him into custody on suspicion of being the Whitechapel murderer. He was taken to the Carlton-terrace Police Station, where he was detained for three and a half hours.—Mr. De Rutzen told the applicant he could not grant him process in that court. If he had suffered any wrong by being locked up on suspicion of being the perpetrator of the murders in Whitechapel, and thought he could recover redress, he must bring an action in the county-court.

METROPOLITAN MEDICAL SCHOOLS.

Yesterday at several of the medical schools in connection with the metropolitan hospitals addresses were delivered on the occasion of the opening of the winter session. At the Westminster Hospital Mr. C. Stonham devoted his address to the subject of medical education, which, he said, must still be thought worthy of the most careful discussion, seeing how absolutely essential it was that they should be prepared still further to alter their curriculum to the ever-varying necessities and requirements of the day. Referring to the recent suggestion of the General Medical Council that three months should be devoted to the study of fever, the lecturer said that the period was too long to devote exclusively to one or two diseases, and that probably the solution of the difficulty would be found in the throwing open, with certain precautions, the metropolitan fever hospitals for systematic teaching and study.

Dr. Augustus Waller was the lecturer at St. Mary's, and he described the progress made in the science of physiology.

Lecturing at St. George's Hospital, Dr. Ewart urged that more culture should be expected of medical men than of others, and they should be selected from the best scholars, not from the least-informed. In the future the art of thinking must be taught and practised, meanwhile the medical student of to-morrow would find in concentration his most hopeful tactics.

At St. Thomas's Dr. Cullingworth chose for his subject the preventibility of puerperal fever. He reminded his audience that the mortality of childbirth was much higher than it was popularly supposed to be, no fewer than 3,877 deaths having been returned as due to this cause in England and Wales in 1886, including 479 in the single registration district of London. The most reliable statistics went to show that at least 65 to 75 per cent. of these cases were due to puerperal fever. Almost the whole of this enormous loss of life might in future be avoided, and puerperal fever—both in its fatal and non-fatal manifestations—practically stamped out. Already the practice of antiseptics (or disinfection) in obstetrics had achieved wonderful results, as statistics he quoted showed. The use of antiseptic precautions in private practice in Germany was made compulsory by the State. The tendency of public opinion in this country was not in the direction of compulsory legislation in such matters. The use of antiseptics in Great Britain was likely to remain a question of individual responsibility, not of penal enactment; but he pleaded for their adoption.

In the course of his address at Middlesex Hospital, Mr. W. Foster, M.A., F.C.S., urged students to give chemistry a prominent place in their studies, and not to ignore an art which had done much for the advancement of human knowledge and for the alleviation of human suffering.

Dr. Eliza Dauban, M.D., the lecturer at the London School of Medicine for Women, urged lady students not to adopt an attitude of haste, a disposition to pass over too quickly, in spite of examinations, the various galleries of knowledge through which the curriculum of study necessarily led.

Sir Charles Russell last night delivered his presidential address to the Lowestoft and District Liberal Association. He said that no doubt when the great issue of Home Rule first came before the country, it was not prepared for it; but things had now materially changed. It was no longer regarded as a fearful bogey. It was nothing more than an attempt to put the responsibility for their own affairs upon the Irish people through powers delegated by the Imperial Parliament to a legislative assembly in Ireland. He condemned the action of Mr. Chamberlain and the Liberal Unionists as tending to defeat the success of true Liberal principles.

Mr. John Ed. Redmond, M.P., who on last Wednesday was sentenced to five weeks' imprisonment for a speech delivered at Scarawalsh, co. Wexford, has been taken to Tullamore Gaol.

MEMORIAL TO LORD SHAFTESBURY.—The first portion of the work entrusted to the Shaftesbury Memorial Committee was finished yesterday, when the statue of the late Earl was unveiled before a large assemblage in Westminster Abbey by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts. Prior to the ceremony in the body of the Cathedral a short meeting was held in the Jerusalem Chamber, over which Canon Duckworth, in the absence of the Dean, presided. The committee were formally welcomed to the Abbey.

THE SALT SYNDICATE.—Our Chester correspondent telegraphs: "The promoters of the Cheshire salt syndicate definitely announce that they have been successful in securing the extensive works of the Droitwich Salt Company (Limited). It was only after much difficulty that an arrangement was come to. The 'corner' in salt is now practically complete, for the syndicate have secured the Irish salt mines in county Antrim, the Middlesborough Salt Works, the Fleetwood Salt Works, and every manufactory in Cheshire. As a consequence of the early prospect of a considerable rise in the price of salt, the shares of salt companies had jumped up 50 per cent."

H. B. SMITH begs to say to his clients and the public generally that he has no connection with any other broker or firm of brokers of the same name or any other name.

THERE is no other broker or firm of brokers who, when they say they have made a profit, advertise the number of cheques sent out, and offer to produce the counterfoil of the cheques for inspection as I do.

I HAVE NEVER yet CLOSED a POOL EXCEPT at a GOOD PROFIT.

UP to the PRESENT, I have formed nine large POOLS. Of these I have closed FOUR at big profits, and sent out the cheques; and two others are also practically closed at large profits.

135 CHEQUES SENT OUT on Sept. 28, 1888, numbered 3,537 to 3,671 inclusive, for profits in the CHATHAM ORDINARY POOL, opened Aug. 20, 1888. Net profit 41 per cent.

217 CHEQUES SENT OUT on Sept. 18, 1888, numbered 3,320 to 3,536 in NORTH BRITISH ORDINARY POOL. Net profit 40 per cent.

162 CHEQUES SENT OUT in FIRST MILWAUKEE POOL on Aug. 7, 1888, numbered 2,501 to 2,662. Net profit 40½ per cent.

ALL the COUNTERFOILS of the CHEQUES and the PAID CHEQUES pasted in the cheque books can be SEEN at the OFFICES.

TWO other POOLS, viz., the LAKE SHORE POOL and CENTRAL PACIFIC POOL, practically CLOSED at LARGE PROFITS, and will be finally closed and the profits distributed shortly.

POOL ADVICE.

SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY DEFERRED ("DOVER A").

The Chatham Ordinary Pool, opened on Aug. 20, was closed on Tuesday last, the 25th inst., and showed a net profit (after payment of all contangoes, commissions, &c.) of £41 on each £100 subscribed. The usual multiplicity of cheques for subscriptions and accruing profits were sent out yesterday.

Although the price of Chathams has not moved up very much, I was able to make this good profit because, as I explained to my clients in forming the Pool, there is very little risk in this stock, and I was consequently enabled to open a very much larger quantity of stock than I dare do in the more speculative securities.

This makes out of the nine public pools opened by me, four actually closed, at profits ranging from 40 per cent. upwards, in which nearly one thousand cheques have been sent out to subscribers for profits. A large portion of the stock opened in two others, viz., the Lake Shore and Central Pacific, has also been closed at a good profit, so that these may be also considered as practically closed with a successful issue, making six out of nine pools closed at handsome profits, and no pool has yet been closed at a loss.

These facts speak for themselves, and far more eloquently than I could do.

This week being mainly taken up by the settlement, and my attention being devoted to taking up, and carrying over, the enormous blocks of stock open for the Pools, I did not commence a fresh Pool this week.

The next Pool will, therefore, commence to-morrow (Tuesday), Oct. 2, and will be for the rise in South-Eastern Railway Deferred Stock, known in the market sometimes as Dover "A" and sometimes as "Doras."

This stock, at the present price (about 114), is undoubtedly one of the very cheapest of English Railway Stocks. The companion stock, Brighton "A," with which it usually moves in sympathy, now stands at 133, having risen from 115 in a few weeks. Dover "A," meanwhile, has risen comparatively little, and its rise has yet to come, and of this I propose to take advantage. The best authorities in the market usually consider that the normal difference in price between Brighton "A" and Dover "A" should be 11, at which it stood for years. The difference in the price is now 19, and I confidently look for Dover "A" to decrease this difference by rising to at least 123, or possibly 125, in a very short space of time.

The prospects of the line are at the present time most excellent. All matters of dispute between themselves and their neighbours, the Brighton line, which have been such a prevalent cause of discomfort to the shareholders in the past, have now been happily arranged; the Paris Exhibition is coming on, which cannot fail to largely increase their traffics, and the continued fine weather is causing large accumulations of holiday traffic to now go forward.

The settled outlook of political affairs abroad, and the difficulty, increasing day by day, which investors have of finding satisfactory investments for their money will, I think, cause the boom which has set in in English railways to go very much further, and I look for Dover "A" to play a very prominent part in it.

Several of my clients, although I am pleased to say but very few of them, not more than two or three, have written to me to express their surprise that in some of the Pools the price has receded a little after I commenced to buy the stock. I cannot but express my astonishment, but in case the idea exists amongst others I should like to explain that such a thing ought not, and need not, cause any dissatisfaction or uneasiness whatever. No mortal man could be so infallible as always to hit the very bottom price of a stock. If there was such a man he would soon cease all business to cease. The very fact of buying a stock, and thereby putting it up, brings in sellers from other quarters to secure profits, naturally causing a temporary decline. I commenced to work Pools for the very reason that clients might not be affected prejudicially by this, and to obviate the necessity of writing to clients that I had bought stock for them at 114, and that it had declined to 113, thereby exhausting and losing their cover, when they afterwards perhaps had the mortification of seeing the stock mount up to 120. In the Mexican Railway Pool the stock fell 1 after I commenced to buy, yet I brought the Pool out a good profit; in the Lake Shore Pool the stock fell 4 after I bought, yet I have practically brought it to a very successful issue; in the Central Pacific Pool the stock fell over 2 after I bought, and is even now below my buying price, yet I shall make a good profit on the Pool, because I seized the opportunity to close a greater portion of the stock at a time when it did show a profit.

Where, then, is the excuse for grumbling because a stock does not always mount straight away up, directly I commence to buy, without any reaction? In the case of the First Milwaukee and the North British Ordinary it actually did so, but that cannot always be expected. Surely the ultimate result of the Pools is the proper criterion of my methods. Some people really seem to think that I have only to turn a sort of machine and the stock promptly goes up, and that where it does not I have neglected to give a sufficient number of turns to the handle. I cannot, of course, expect all my clients to have a thorough knowledge of Stock Exchange work, but those who have not will, I trust, accept this explanation as satisfactory.

The Pool will commence to-morrow (Tuesday), Oct. 2. Country remittances will be in time by Wednesday morning's post, but clients will expedite the enormous labour entailed by these Pools by sending as early as possible. Any amount not being less than £5 can be subscribed.

No liability whatever is incurred by subscribers beyond the amount they actually remit.

As in all other Pools, advices will be sent out of the price at which all stock is bought for the Pool the same day that the transactions take place.

It may save trouble if I point out to subscribers they cannot transfer to a future Pool any moneys from a Pool not finally closed.

For the benefit of such of my clients and the public who do not thoroughly understand how I work these Pools, I am having printed an explanatory circular, which will be sent post free on application. I hope to have this ready in a few days.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

"I feel duty bound to inform you of the wonderful effects of Clarke's Blood Mixture on me. I have had suffering over two years of a severe nature. I first consulted the best medical aid I could possibly procure for over six months, till my means were run out, and with a sad heart I was compelled to come into the workhouse hospital, where I now am. I had been here 18 months, and my legs gradually got worse. I began to think they would never get better, till about five months ago I read in a copy of the Hull, East Yorkshire, and Lincolnshire Times of 'Clarke's Blood Mixture,' and I determined that when I could raise the means I would try it; so I commenced to deprive myself of little necessaries till at length I had raised eleven shillings. I got my sister to purchase me a large bottle. She brought me one in on May 6, and to my surprise she brought me 1s. 9d. back, which enabled me to purchase two small pots of your Miraculous Salve. I commenced to use the Blood Mixture on May 7. I then had five wounds on the left leg, one very large on the ankle-bone, one on the shin about the size of half-a-crown, and three on the calf almost as large. The right leg was somewhat similar, but there were three sores which I thought would break into one, but all are perfectly healed up now but one small place on the left ankle about the size of a shilling. There are 15 patients in the ward that I am in, and they were surprised to see my legs when I had taken the mixture a week, and there are three of them now using it. I am very sorry, indeed, that I cannot purchase another bottle. You may judge for yourself how I am fixed, after being in here 18 months. My sister, Mrs. Bulmer, lives at No. 26, Grimsby-lane, Market-place, Hull, and if you would kindly send me a small quantity of your Mixture to the above address I should be able to get it, and I shall never forget you as long as I live.—Yours faithfully, "EDWARD STATHERS.
No. 5 Ward, Anlaby-road Workhouse Hospital,
Hull, June 15, 1888."

LATER.
"I write to let you know how I am getting on. I received the bottle of Mixture you sent me, and the wounds are now completely healed up. I will be out of here in a few days, and get to work, which is already promised me. I am going to reside at my sister's, Mrs. Bulmer. If you wish to use this case for the benefit of other poor sufferers, do so. The results of your Mixture is really wonderful.—I remain, your thankful servant,
June 26, 1888. "EDWARD STATHERS."

LONDON, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 2.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has been received with great enthusiasm at Miskolcz, in Hungary, where the Prince arrived yesterday for the purpose of inspecting the regiment of Hussars of which he is honorary colonel.

Strange intelligence comes from Toronto of an attempt on the part of the United States Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs to interfere with the independence of the Dominion of Canada and the rights of the United Kingdom over British North America.

Mr. Balfour visited Glasgow yesterday, and in the afternoon held a consultation with the representatives of the Liberal Unionist Associations of the West of Scotland, who presented him with an address of welcome. In the evening the right hon. gentleman spoke at a crowded meeting of Conservatives, vindicating the recent acts of the Executive in Ireland.

Lord Sackville died at his residence, Knole Park, Sevenoaks, yesterday morning, in the sixty-eighth year of his age. His lordship, who was twice married, leaves no issue, and is succeeded in the title and estate by Sir Lionel Sackville-West.

Yesterday, on the occasion of the opening of the Winter session, addresses were delivered at the various medical schools connected with the metropolitan hospitals. At St. Thomas's Dr. Cullingworth discoursed on the preventability of the spread of puerperal fever by the use of antiseptic precautions.

Pheasant-shooting opened yesterday with satisfactory results so far as the South of England and most of the Midland Counties are concerned, the weather being bright and agreeable, though cold. In the North-West, however, sport was much interfered with by rain and snowstorms.

Mr. Wynne Baxter, coroner for East Middlesex, opened an inquest yesterday respecting the woman who was found dead with her throat cut in Berner-street, Whitechapel. Evidence was given by two or three members of a Socialist Club in the immediate vicinity of the scene of the crime. This club was kept open till past midnight, and the steward on returning at one o'clock on Sunday morning was the first to discover the body. The inquest was adjourned, it being understood that for the present the deceased must be described as a woman unknown, as the evidence of identity is not complete.

But little further information has been brought to light by yesterday's investigations concerning the two horrible murders in the East-end early on Sunday morning. Several persons of suspicious appearance were arrested in the course of the day; but, as they were able to give satisfactory explanations, they were released. The criminal is still at large. Sir James Fraser, Commissioner of the City Police, has offered a reward of £500 to any person who will give information leading to the conviction of the murderer of the woman whose body was found in Mitre-square, Aldgate. In reply to a letter in which a cheque was enclosed for £300 towards a reward fund, the Home Secretary has returned the cheque, reiterating his opinion that the offer of a reward in these cases would not be attended by any useful result.

John Brown, labourer, was brought up at the Westminster Police-court yesterday, charged with the wilful murder of his wife. He was remanded for eight days.

At the Bank yesterday 361,000 sovereigns were withdrawn for South America, and £135,000 in bar gold was sent in from Paris. The Stock Markets opened firm, but gave way later on the bullion efflux. American and Mexican railways closed exceptionally firm, and English and Canadian finally marked a reduction. Copper and diamond shares declined. Consols were flat and ⅛ lower.

IF Mr. BALFOUR had elected to let other people speak while he continued silently to discharge his own onerous duties as quietly, fearlessly, and successfully as is his wont, nobody could have found fault with him. It is the fashion, however, nowadays that every public personage must "make his proofs" from time to time upon the platform; and the Irish Secretary is about the last man to shirk a battle, be it political, administrative, or oratorical. Accordingly last night he delivered a thoughtful and notable address in the Merchants' Hall at Glasgow, to read which after the hysterical utterances of Home Rulers and their allies is like emerging from a lunatic asylum into the placid pathways of a garden. Why, indeed, must the opponents of the Union and of the Government "tear a passion to tatters" as they do? Why do they seem perpetually struggling to find the most fiery adjectives and the most furious substantives which the dictionary can furnish—short of absolute blasphemy and libel—wherewith to enforce the fact that they differ from the existing majority? Truth surely does not need the tremendous assistance of all this spluttering rage, nor patriotism demand that its votaries should foam, metaphorically speaking, at the mouth, and pass into a kind of epilepsy of epithets at the mere mention of Mr. BALFOUR's name. If he is so very guilty for merely putting in action the laws passed by Parliament, how much more guilty Parliament must be, and how much the most guilty of all the nation itself! We would suggest that the chief speakers of Separatism should so far overcome their antipathy to the Irish Secretary as to take a leaf from his book, and talk for the future as he does, calmly, argumentatively, and to the reason, not to the spleens, of their audiences. They would be better heard, and better heeded, if they observed and acted upon the lesson that from first to last of this speech at Glasgow there was not a single word of abuse of any political opponent, although the speaker may be said to live in an atmosphere of vituperation. It is the Celtic way, no doubt, to go into those ecstasies of red-hot rhetoric which contrast so badly with the measured simplicity of Mr. BALFOUR's discourse. He began by most justly acknowledging the debt which the country owes to the Liberal Unionists, who have rendered finally impossible the projected dismemberment of the realm. If such a crime and blunder could not be effected at first, and while the constituencies did not quite understand what was in progress, it can never now be effected at all. Every day adds more and more to the number of those who perceive that Mr. GLADSTONE's Bill must have led to civil war, after destroying the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament; and since that Bill disappeared nothing has taken its place. The party of Separation wave what we have before called a flagstaff without a banner; there is literally nothing before the country except a clamour; and that same "Home Rule" which we hear constantly vociferated is, as Mr. BALFOUR truly said last night, nobody's wish, nobody's object. Irish tenants echo it only with a mind to what can be got out of the cry in regard to the land. Agitators raise it only as the name of a means, if ever reached, to fresh agitation. The sole consideration which could make Irishmen regard Home Rule seriously is the absurdly serious way in which Englishmen listen to them when they howl for it. Some of them want their farms for nothing, and some of them wish for salaries and subsidies continued, while others of them desire to keep Erin from settling down and prospering; but they all secretly wonder at the matter-of-fact Saxon who, when they rave about freedom and nationality, fails to see the twinkle of "devilment" in their eyes.

In the second and longer address at St. Andrew's Hall Mr. BALFOUR, selecting one among many subjects, went into the question of the treatment of the political prisoners. We are of opinion here again that it is more than half a pity to encourage speeches by speeches; that a statesman with Mr. BALFOUR's work to do should not be asked, and should not easily be tempted, to exhaust himself in replying to the wild charges of irresponsible agitators. Still it is, as we have observed, the fashion to use up our already over-worked public servants in this wearying competition of rhetoric, and the Irish Secretary seems to feel the strain about as little, and to bear the burden as cheerfully, as anybody. Nor can we deny that, if he felt leisure and strength for the effort, it was well worth while to demolish, as he did last night, the ridiculous misrepresentations of the Separatists. They are totally unprovided with any policy by their leader, and consequently they have adopted that of calumniating the Government and its supporters, reiterating against them the charge of governing by "coercion," and bolstering up this charge with the most fictitious illustrations. They keep, as Mr. BALFOUR said, "manufactories of grievances" at work wherein they turn out "horrors by the ton"; but here, again, we believe that nothing astonishes them so much as the rather considerable measure of belief which their rhapsodies about cruelty and their romances about eviction win from the kind-hearted and well-meaning British public. There was, for example, the stock story of Mr. MANDEVILLE, which might have grown into a legend of tyrannical wickedness in years to come, save for the simple narrative which the Chief Secretary for Ireland last night furnished. Who, that has listened with sad misgiving to the heart-rending allegations about this unfortunate gentleman, was aware of the few striking particulars adduced at Glasgow yesterday? It was declared by at least a hundred fervid orators that the "base, brutal, and bloody" Government had been his death, and Englishmen who did not attend to the facts, and who all hate cruelty, and wish well to Ireland and Irishmen, felt somewhat uncomfortable. Now they learn that Mr. MANDEVILLE did not die until seven months after he left prison; that he lost only three pounds out of seventeen stone weight, while immured there for inciting people to resist the police; that he quitted gaol in such excellent health that he himself said "it had not knocked a feather out of him"; and that he had never felt any need to call in a doctor until shortly before he succumbed to a sudden affection of the throat. Then, why did not his friends and panegyrists honestly tell us all this themselves? Why have they concocted a MANDEVILLE myth, and inveighed from a hundred platforms against "coercion," if these particulars are true, and "coercion" had no more to do with Mr. MANDEVILLE's lamented dissolution than the Czar of RUSSIA? It is another instance of that marvellous vivacity of the Celtic imagination, which invents a horror, and ends by half-believing it, careless of the fact that the English nature is to take people at their word, and, when deceived, never to trust them again. Mr. BALFOUR showed that the supposed invalid, whose health was, it was alleged, shaken by the imprisonment he had courted, attended numerous open-air meetings, led a most exposing and agitated existence, behaved in a manner which would have knocked up a bullock, and finally expired of a malady which the experts deposed could only have been of a brief incubation. Of course, as the Chief Secretary remarked, Mr. MANDEVILLE had a right to do as he liked with himself, and was doubtless inspired by a sense of duty. Yet how absurd it must seem to represent such a robust agitator as owing his deplored demise to the light sentence which he had discharged seven months before he contracted his illness!

Mr. BALFOUR, we fear, is himself too Celtic, too imaginative, if he believes for a moment that the calm exposure] of the rubbish talked about "coercion" will stay the tide of Home Rule mendacity. As little will the simple logic of his observations about prison discipline and prison punishments go home to minds which do not want to hear reason, and do not mean to hear it. The intensely conscientious character of British administration, so plainly evidenced by this perhaps too elaborate defence, is precisely the thing which Separatist agitators count upon and rejoice in, while they affect to deny it. That the charges iterated and reiterated should be true is quite a minor point with them; the central question for their "manufactory of grievances" is, will they seem true? will they circulate long enough to do mischief and to make the consciences of English voters uneasy? If they will, Mr. BALFOUR may contradict them by and by in his quiet faithful way; but by that time a new batch of "horrors" will be in hand, and fresh torrents of tears will be shed over new fictions. Is it really worth the labour to go publicly case by case over these calumnies? It would be surely almost better to pass a Bill once for all to make delicacy of constitution an excuse for treason, rebellion, resistance to authority, and subversal of law, and not to mind any longer what anybody says and does in Ireland, if he hasn't a certificate of vigorous health, and does not measure forty inches round the chest. Or, if "Irish independence is to be gained by living three weeks without a shirt," as some patriots have seemed lately to believe, what, in Heaven's name, has become of the Irish humour which in "ould" days would have laughed more at such childish ways of wooing liberty than any Unionist can? The Chief Secretary pointed out that, as a matter of fact, the prison rules in Ireland are very much milder and more indulgent than those in England and Scotland. We need not follow the honest and painstaking steps of the Chief Secretary as coil by coil and knot by knot he untied the tangle of humbug and fiction woven round these supposed cases of "coercion." Enough that, if we lived in times less politically flabby, that Minister would be justly blamed who stooped to answer such feeble falsehoods. That he does so laboriously answer them is in itself proof enough of the almost fantastic fidelity of an Administration to every dictate of humanity and fair-play, and certainly from henceforth the Separatist orators must look for something happier and more telling than prison hardships which kill after a healthy interval of seven months, and martyrdoms witnessed to by doctors who never saw the sufferer, and mitigated by surreptitious sandwiches, and all sorts of tender official indulgences.

YESTERDAY, at several of the medical schools of the metropolis, addresses were delivered inaugurating the winter session, the burden in not a few of these prelections being the recent advances in medical knowledge and surgical skill. It is scarcely possible to think of these topics without feeling that it is an undoubted reproach to our administrative system that it does not utilise the yearly accumulating gains of the healing art and sanitary science to a much greater extent than at present. Nobody would compare the state of hygienic medicine, and of the studies ancillary to it, as they are taught and applied to-day, with their condition half a century ago. Much more is known now than was then deemed possible of the origin and propagation of infectious diseases, and a similar advance of knowledge has taken place with respect to the most appropriate and effective methods of treating them, not only in the individual, but as regards a community suffering under their visitation. Nor, of course, is it to be denied that, as compared with the state of things which existed fifty years since, there has been a considerable development of the means of bringing the teachings of science to bear upon the protection of the public health. We have passed sanitary Acts innumerable, and, though the working of many, if not most, of them leaves much to be desired, they have, of course, done a good deal to mitigate the intensity and restrict the spread of epidemic outbreaks. Yet it is impossible to regard their provisions, and still less their operation, as bringing our administrative system in line with the most advanced contemporary knowledge. It is probably no exaggeration to say that most, if not all, of the maladies which are communicable by one human being to another could, if sanitary science were allowed an absolutely free hand, be stamped out. Such a degree of freedom is obviously not to be found in any country, for in all—even the most autocratically governed—there must be some limit to the interference of the State with private liberty, even for a purpose so excellent as that of protecting the public health. Still it is beyond question that in this country the traditional tenderness for the privileges of the citizen, and respect for the theory that "his house is his castle," has placed the practice of preventive medicine for many years at a peculiar disadvantage; and even now, when the maxim is not so weakly permitted to stand in the way of the common well-being, we are yet behindhand in our arrangements for bringing the control of the community to bear in these matters upon the individual. In an article contributed to the current issue of the "Fortnightly Review," Dr. Robson Roose exhibits some of these defects in a very striking light. Foremost among them stands the want of due provision for notifying sanitary authorities of the fact of an outbreak of "contagious, infectious, or epidemic disease." The duties of a medical officer on receiving such information are clear enough, and are enjoined with sufficient peremptoriness; but to the question who is to inform him the answer, we regret to say, is of an extremely unsatisfactory kind. All depends on the regulations that happened to have been framed by the sanitary authority for the district in which the outbreak occurs. In some—indeed, in most—places it is nobody's business to make such a report; in others the medical attendant of the person or family affected is charged with the duty and if he neglects to perform it, is visited with a penalty. In yet other instances the obligation is concurrently imposed upon the householder, so that here a dual notification is required. It is idle, as the writer says, to enforce such a practice in one place and neglect it in another where perhaps much benefit would result from its introduction.

There can be no hesitation in saying that the second or third of these rules ought to be the one adopted by the State, and, instead of being left optional with the framers of local sanitary bye-laws, embodied in Imperial legislation. A Bill to secure notification is at the present time, as Dr. Roose reminds us, before the House of Commons, and the questions actually at issue with respect to it are only two in number. Ought notification to be compulsory? and upon whom should the responsibility devolve? Assuming that the first question is to be answered in the affirmative—and it is difficult to imagine a serious reformer of our sanitary laws entertaining any other reply for a moment—the second ought not to present much difficulty. Obviously the medical attendant is the only person really competent to report the fact that a case of infectious disease exists in a given house; it is his duty to discover the nature of the disease before he can properly treat it. Dr. Roose suggests that the medical attendant should be required to furnish the patient's friends or the householder with a certificate setting forth the nature of the illness; that the friends should be required, under a penalty for neglect, to send the certificate to the sanitary inspector, who would acknowledge its receipt to the medical attendant, and forward him a small fee—say, half-a-crown. If he considered that the patient's friends would do all that was necessary in the way of disinfection and isolation when the proper time came, the sanitary authorities would take no further action in the matter; but their aid would be invoked whenever the doctor had reason to believe that the friends were either unwilling or unable to disinfect the premises in a satisfactory manner. This plan, it is observed, "would appear to be free from the objections raised against charging the medical attendant with the duty which clearly ought to belong to the householder." It may be doubted, however, whether in freeing itself from these objections the scheme does not entangle itself in others. It does not clearly appear whether the "requirement" of the medical attendant to give the certificate to the householder is or is not a legally imperative one, with a penalty attached to its neglect. Unless it be so, it would be in the power of any doctor who happened to be aware of a householder's anxiety to conceal the fact, and weak enough to humour it, to assist him openly or tacitly in the evasion of the law. We are very emphatically of opinion that the duty of communicating to some public authority the fact of the existence of infectious disease is one which cannot safely be left to any one but the medical attendant, and that for him it should be compulsory. If it is thought that to permit him to make such communication through the householder instead of directly to the sanitary inspector will render the duty less invidious, there seems no particular objection to thus relieving him; but it should be as much a case of "must," and not of "may," in regard to the framing of the certificate, as with respect to its transmission to the local authorities. And we are strongly disposed to think that, in the event of the householder neglecting or refusing to transmit such certificate to the sanitary inspector, it should become the duty of the medical attendant to make the communication himself.

As to the steps which should be taken in reference to the house itself and its inmates, their rigour and efficiency will, of course, depend in the main upon the extent to which public opinion will allow these qualities to be infused into them. It is obvious that, without some abatement of the Englishman's sacred right of doing as he pleases, whatever the consequences to his neighbour, it would be impossible to work effective health regulations at all; and the larger the abatement that the private citizen is willing to make the more ample will be the power wielded by the sanitary authorities for the protection of the community. It is really to the interest of society, for instance, that the existence of a source of infection at a particular spot should be known not only to the local authorities, but to the people of the neighbourhood at large; but possibly opinion is not yet ripe in this country for the system adopted in some States of the American Union, where it is not uncommon to find a house warning the passer-by of its latent dangers by the exhibition of a placard bearing in conspicuous letters the word "Fever." If, however, we are not prepared in England for such a reversion to seventeenth-century simplicity in the form of this modern version of the "red cross" and the pious prayer for the Divine mercy, we can, at any rate, take the earlier and easier step in this direction. If we cannot go so far as openly to acquaint all the inhabitants of a locality with the fact of an outbreak of infectious disease at a given spot, we can, at all events, ensure their obtaining the information in their corporate capacity. The sanitary authorities can then, at least, act for their protection, without the population being aware of their own danger till it has passed away, or possibly without their ever hearing of it at all. It will be the duty of these authorities to insist upon the strictest isolation; and here again it appears to us that the legislative provisions above suggested stand in need of a little tightening. No doubt it is desirable, if it can be done with safety, to leave the medical attendant to decide whether the patient's friends are able and willing to do all that is necessary for purposes of disinfection, and to allow the health authorities to regulate their own conduct in the matter in accordance with this decision; but care must be taken here also, that responsibility does not, as it has a way of doing when passed from one hand to another, mysteriously vanish altogether. If it is thought advisable to spare the household a visit from the sanitary inspector, and practically to allow the doctor to take his place, the responsibility must go over with the duty. For the purposes of the investigation into this particular matter the doctor will be acting, not as the adviser of the patient, but as representative of the public, and it is essential that his guarantee of the sufficiency of the disinfecting arrangements should be given in some formal, tangible, and binding way. The grim enemy with which Science is at war can only be subdued by a rigid process of siege, and no legislative arrangement should be sanctioned which would make it possible for the beleaguered foe to slip out through a gap in the besieging circle.

It is time that her Majesty's Government awoke to a proper sense of the responsibilities which weigh upon them as a consequence of the unprecedented series of atrocities that have produced almost a frenzy of panic at the East-end, and have spread alarm and apprehension throughout the length and breadth of this vast Metropolis. It is not assuredly the first time that a great city of the Empire has been angered and affrighted by the repeated occurrence of dreadful deeds of blood; still there is scarcely any analogy between the six appalling deeds of assassination and savagery which will be known in the black chronicle of crime as the Whitechapel Murders and former cases of aggravated homicide, cruel and revolting enough in themselves, but which had still, from the beginning, an ascertained and palpable motive. Nearly sixty years ago Edinburgh first and London afterwards were convulsed with dread and horror by the fiendish deeds respectively of Burke and Hare and of Bishop and Williams. Then, however, from the first it was suspected, and the suspicion was very soon justified by certainty, that the miscreants who committed these horrible acts, and who decoyed cripples, drunken men, imbeciles, and poor Italian boys to their lairs, first to stupefy and then to suffocate them with pitch-plasters, were, in the cant language of the period, a monstrous development of the body-snatchers or "resurrection men," who found it easier and safer to murder their victims than to rifle graves in order to sell the corpses to the surgeons, whose anatomical studies were impeded by obstructive legislation. Still the hanging of the ruffians implicated in these atrocities was not the only cause of the immediate and definitive cessation of the crime of burking. Parliament passed an Anatomy Act, which enabled medical men to obtain "subjects" without resorting to any illegitimate means; and the scum of humanity, who had hitherto been the purveyors of the dissecting-room, found their profitable but ghastly occupation gone. While they flourished the burkers were a terror; but their whereabouts was guessed at, their intentions were patent, their movements were watched, and they were at last hunted down and consigned to the gallows; and the burkers, thank Heaven, are an extinct race of demons in human form. In the Whitechapel murders we have not, beyond the equivocal medical hypothesis broached by the coroner in the case of Annie Chapman, one single clue, or even fragment of a clue—beyond the finding of a portion of the apron of one of the victims—which is likely to guide us either to the detection of the assassin or assassins or to the possible motive which may have prompted the commission of these unspeakable crimes. The anatomical theory is, we repeat, almost entirely untenable; and we are thus left to weave the merest figments of fancy, and to form unpleasant visions of roving lunatics distraught with homicidal mania or bloodthirsty lust; of abandoned desperadoes wreaking their thirst for slaughter on forlorn and hopeless women, the wretchedest and most pitiable of their sex, to satisfy some inscrutably foul and crapulous vendetta; or, finally, we may dream of monsters, and ogres, and chimeras in the shape of wretched beings who catch from each awful story the contagion of senseless crime, and, out of a horrid imitativeness, repeat the abominable acts which they have seen described.

It is because the public are so thoroughly devoid of any scrap of trustworthy fact on which to build a plausible structure of probability, and it is equally because the detective police are to all appearance as impotent in their uncertainty as the community at large, that we call upon the Government to assume, and with a hearty good will, the duties which clearly devolve upon it in this unprecedented social crisis. And in doing so we wish it to be clearly understood that this is no case of a wagoner finding the wheels of his vehicle impounded in a morass and calling upon Jupiter to help him. Mr. Matthews is certainly no embodiment of the idea of even the weakest type of a terrestrial Jove; but from the Home Secretary were he as strong as he is feeble and as able as he is incompetent, we do not expect Administrative miracles. We have exposed, with justifiable plain speech, the notorious and shameful shortcomings of the Detective Department, or rather of the botched-up makeshift which does duty for a Detective Department, at Scotland-yard; but, even were Sir Charles Warren seconded by a civilian Director of Criminal Investigation as astute, as sagacious, and as fertile as a Vidocq or a Claude, we should still frankly acknowledge the possibility of there being crime so occult and criminals so cunning that the most lynx-eyed detective might for a while be baffled and perplexed in his quest. That which we exhort the Government to bear in mind, and which the public have a right to call upon the supreme authority to do, is that some measures be forthwith resorted to calculated to reassure the public mind and to inspire confidence in lieu of a widely-spreading feeling of mistrust, which may deepen into wrath, at what is not unnaturally thought to be the lethargy and supineness of the advisers of the Crown in presence of a dreadful and almost unexampled public peril. There is an uneasy impression abroad that those who are responsible may imagine, for the reason that this is the dullest period of the autumn, that Parliament is "up," that honourable Members are away shooting or deer-stalking or wandering about the Continent, or edifying provincial audiences by threadbare dissertations upon thrice-told political tales, that what passes in London cannot be of much moment. Unhesitatingly do we advise the Government to disabuse their minds of a most pernicious and perilous error. It is quite true that these shocking acts of massacre and mutilation have taken place in one small, sordid, and indigent quarter of an immense district which, during the last ten years, has been rapidly improving in the status of its dwellings and the character of its inhabitants, but of which the majority of the inhabitants of West and Central London know about as much as they do of the Hindoo Koosh or the Northern Territory of South Australia. It is also true that the half-dozen human creatures so foully done to death within so short a time in this restricted area were only poor penniless unfortunates; but their blood as loudly calls for vengeance as though that of as many titled-ladies had been shed in the palaces of Park-lane.

The duty of the Government is clear. It is bound to show that the capital of the Empire is not ruled only by vestries, boards of guardians and commissioners of police, but that above them all are the power, the prerogative, and the prestige of the Crown, as invoked and administered by the servants of the Crown for the benefit of the subject. We are, after all, and beyond all, the Queen's lieges; and it is fitting, it is essential, it is imperative that when the occasion demands it and the safety of the subject is imminently in peril remedial action should be taken in the Queen's name. Already the Vigilance Committee in Whitechapel have memorialised the Home Office in the hope of a Government reward being offered for the detection of the murderer or murderers; and to this reasonable request a rambling reply was made by the unsatisfactory functionary in Whitehall, treating the crimes themselves in a languidly official manner; making the inconsequent and unsupported allegation that money rewards for the discovery of offences did more harm than good, stating further that the Government saw no reason for departing from its practice of refraining from offering such a reward. Mr. Matthews carries out his principle so far that he actually declines three hundred pounds tendered him by gentlemen in the City, who requested that it should be offered in the name of the Government. Small wonder that his peculiarly nonchalant response to a reasonable and respectful memorial has been followed by a petition, couched in the most loyal language, to the Throne itself. It is painful to think that our Sovereign Lady the Queen should be asked to lend her ear to so sorrowful and so sickening a tale; but it is her Majesty's Ministers who, personally, are called upon to make a practical acknowledgment and a tangible satisfaction to the prayer of the petitioners. It is the Marquis of Salisbury, and not the easy-going gentleman at the Home Office, who can render the required recognition and give the help insisted upon. The Crown should offer a very large money reward for information which shall lead to the arrest and conviction of the perpetrator or perpetrators of these unutterably abominable deeds; and we say deliberately that the amount of this reward should be reckoned not by hundreds but by thousands of pounds. "The eagle," says the old proverb, "does not catch flies"; and when the Imperial hand is extended for the welfare of the realm it should be in a right Imperial fashion that the force and weight of its sway are felt. The Colonial Governments of Victoria and New South Wales could offer a reward of thousands of pounds for the capture, dead or alive, of the notorious Kelly and his gang of bushrangers, and these miscreants were not a more imminent danger and a greater terror to the peaceful communities at the Antipodes than the sanguinary fiend or fiends who committed the Whitechapel murders are to the British Metropolis. The population which was almost paralysed with alarm by the outrages of Kelly and his band of desperadoes did not number more than a million, and it was less for their lives than for the dread of being carried off that they went to bed every night in fear and trembling, not knowing at what hour the bushrangers, armed to the teeth, might ride into the town to "bail up" the local branch bank or "stick-up" the local innkeepers. London is a city the population of which is verging upon five millions; it is guarded by a splendidly organised and disciplined police force, although one notoriously insufficient from a numerical point of view to cope with the enormous mass of crime that seethes in this huge capital. Of an efficient detective force, headed by an experienced chief, it is practically destitute. This is, in plain and unvarnished terms, the position of the Empire City of the World in the presence of its permanent enemies—the burglar, the garroter, and the cut-purse—and in the sporadic presence of the assassin. It is the blood-shedding pest who perturbs order at present, and we cannot tell at what day, what hour, what moment we may not have to record another deed of murdering and mangling done perchance in Whitechapel, but possibly even in Belgravia or in Tyburnia. At such a time it is imperatively necessary that the law-abiding people of the East-end, who may be counted by hundreds of thousands, should know that there is an unstinted solidarity of sympathy between them and their fellow-citizens in every part of the Metropolis. The civic authorities, with a commendable promptitude, strikingly in contrast with remissness elsewhere exhibited, promised a reward of five hundred pounds for information that will enable them to trace the author of these vile deeds. Through their commanding officer, Sir Alfred Kirby, the corps of Tower Engineers have also offered one hundred pounds for the same purpose. This is as it should be. It is expedient also that that intelligent and experienced force the City Police should be assured that all London has full confidence in their harmonious co-operation with the Metropolitan Police in the not yet hopeless task of unravelling this horrible skein of mystery; but the expression of such sympathy and such confidence will be increased fourfold if the Government come forward, as they should have done weeks ago, to offer a weighty reward for the discovery of the criminal or criminals; and, finally, if the public horror and the public anger receive due interpretation in a Royal Proclamation explaining and justifying the act of encouraging, by an Imperial premium, the inquest into these unparalleled deeds of bloodshed.

KAISER WILHELM'S TOUR.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Oct. 1.

Measures of precaution to which the Viennese are not accustomed will be taken in connection with the German Emperor's arrival to-morrow.

The infantry garrisoned in the capital will line the streets along which the Emperor will pass. A battalion of riflemen will guard the station. The house-porters have received strict orders to allow nobody to ascend the roofs and to prevent the crowd from forcing an entrance. The traffic in the streets leading from the Western Railway Station to the Palace will be suspended at the time of the Emperor's arrival.

These regulations have doubtless been issued rather in view of preventing a demonstration than because they were required for the German Kaiser's safety. His Majesty has nothing whatever to fear in Vienna. There is, however, a somewhat turbulent element, partly anti-Semitic and partly ultra-Germanophil, which might feel inclined to demonstrate on the Emperor's arrival. A noisy manifestation of that kind would certainly be objectionable to the German Emperor, who has never given either of the parties in question any grounds for supposing that he sympathised with the principles which they advocate. The German Kaiser will be amicably, if not enthusiastically, welcomed by the majority of the population, who would be sorry to see his visit give rise to any untoward incident.

Commenting upon the visit of the German Kaiser to Vienna it has been stated semi-officially that people who connect the visits of the Emperor of Germany, and in particular those to Vienna and Rome, with any special political question are labouring under a mistake. It is misrepresenting the whole character of the Kaiser's journey to couple it with "Bulgarian affairs," or to pretend that it will have the slightest influence on them.

MAINAU, Oct. 1.

The Emperor William left here for Lindau shortly after two o'clock this afternoon.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

MISKOLCZ, Oct. 1.

At noon to-day the Prince of Wales arrived here, accompanied by a brilliant suite, including the Military Attaché to the British Embassy.

His Royal Highness was received with enthusiastic Eljens by the thousands of people assembled before the railway station, where a detachment of troops was drawn up. The band played "God Save the Queen" as the Prince passed down the front of the guard of honour on the platform.

The general in command having reported himself to his Royal Highness, the Prince, accompanied by the regimental staff, rode to the drill-ground, the way to which was lined by a dense crowd, which warmly cheered his Royal Highness. On reaching the ground the officers of the Hussar Regiment, of which the Prince is honorary colonel, were introduced to his Royal Highness. The regiment then went through a series of evolutions, which the Prince followed with the greatest attention, and afterwards commended in the warmest terms.

The return of his Royal Highness from the Parade Ground to the hotel was suggestive of a triumphal progress. The Prince drove in a State carriage which had been sent here for his special use, and following came a long train of private equipages. The road was again thronged with people who did honour to the English Heir Apparent by waving handkerchiefs and cheering with the utmost ardour.

At two o'clock the civil authorities came to the hotel to pay their respects to his Royal Highness who, through Count Apponyi, conveyed to them his most cordial thanks for the brilliant reception accorded him at Miskolcz.

The Prince of Wales drove off at four o'clock in the afternoon to attend some races organised by the corps of officers.

PARIS DAY BY DAY.

[BY SPECIAL WIRE.]

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, Monday Night.

"Les Mystères de Londres" is the appropriate epithet which Frenchmen are giving to the series of terrible tragedies in the East-end of the British metropolis. One of our French contemporaries published this morning full particulars of the discovery of the two new murders, and this evening there is hardly a journal which does not supply its readers with some account of these appalling crimes. Nothing in any way equalling the sensation produced in London by this succession of mysterious murders has occurred here for many a year. It was some time ere the triple murder of the Rue Montaigne was fully brought home to Pranzini, and then it was suggested that he might also prove to have been the assassin of Marie Aguétant, another fair and frail woman living in the Rue Caumartin. As a natural consequence, other crimes were then by presumption laid at Pranzini's door. This is the only parallel to the "East-end murders" with which the annals of crime in the French metropolis have furnished us for a long time; but, as was subsequently shown, Pranzini was innocent of the murder of Marie Aguétant, with which the Spaniard Prado is now charged. Here, as in London, the police were at first baffled, and I may remind you that the assassin of M. Barrême, the Prefect of the Department of the Eure, who was killed in a railway carriage as he was returning from Paris to Evreux, has never yet been discovered. Indeed, the instances are by no means few in which the police-authorities have been finally compelled to own themselves beaten. At the same time, it may be pointed out that such a series of exceptionally shocking crimes has not occurred here for years, nor have the Parisian detectives often so utterly failed in the effort to track the assassin to his lair. These last dreadful discoveries are already the subject of much comment here, and people sitting outside the cafés on the Boulevards this afternoon perused the different accounts with avidity. The weather seems to have settled again, for the day has been fine and sunny; but Summer has quite gone, and the fresh, almost chilly atmosphere, accompanying the fall of about twenty degrees Fahrenheit, which the thermometer has marked during the past four days, has "landed" us fairly in Autumn.

The Ministers have been indefatigable in unveiling Statues, opening Schools, and presiding over Banquets ever since the Parliamentary vacation gave them some leisure for tournées in the Provinces. Yesterday M. Goblet and M. Lockroy left Paris for the Department of the Somme by an early train, assisted at the inauguration of an important industrial establishment at Escarbotin, and in the evening attended a banquet of 400 covers, at which the Minister for Foreign Affairs delivered a noteworthy speech. Particularly interesting were his allusions to General Boulanger. The general was Minister of War in M. Goblet's Cabinet, and it was currently reported that the ex-Premier was at that time his warmest supporter. M. Goblet readily admitted yesterday that he had defended General Boulanger while he was his colleague, but he immediately added that the General had now no more determined adversary than himself, for General Boulanger, after his removal from the active list for offences against discipline, had abandoned himself to the most dangerous and culpable of enterprises, and had created a new Faction, to which he had given his own name, as though France was not already too much split up by Parties. The general's object was to have a majority in Parliament that would make him President of the Republic; but "the place is already filled and well-filled!" added M. Goblet, who went on to say that he could not suppose that France was weary of "The honest man" who not a twelvemonth ago had been raised to the Chief Magistracy by the Congress. If General Boulanger's partisans were to carry out their programme what would be the result? Some "abominable adventure," like those which France had seen in the past, and the great majority of her citizens had, since 1870, regarded with horror. M. Goblet contended that fully two-thirds of the votes obtained by General Boulanger in the Department of the Somme in July had been given by Reactionaries; but for his part he felt no anxiety. The game could not last. The general had made no new recruits among the Republican Deputies, while Royalists and Bonapartists merely looked upon him as an instrument for the overthrow of the Republic. Turning to the "Revision question," M. Goblet remarked that the Constitution was not perfect; but it could be improved. Then, after referring in contemptuous terms to the Orleanist Monarchy and the Empire, M. Goblet spoke of the progress made under the Republic. M. Goblet's speech, which has created some sensation here, was repeatedly interrupted with loud applause. He and M. Lockroy returned to Paris at an early hour this morning.

General Campenon, who was Minister of War in Gambetta's and other Cabinets, and now varies his quiet life at Neuilly with occasional visits to the Senate, of which he is a member, has met with a serious accident. While he was riding in the Avenue des Acacias in the Bois de Boulogne, a runaway horse, mounted by a young man, came into collision with his own steed. Both horsemen were flung to the ground. The young man escaped unhurt, but the general had his leg broken near the ankle. The injury is by no means trifling; but it is hoped that, thanks to his excellent constitution, the general will be himself again in the course of a few weeks.

France fared badly at the recent "Beauty Show" which was held at Spa, for it was only represented as a fourth by Mademoiselle Padia Lodz, a "lady of Lyons." To judge, moreover, from the name of this damsel, the French nationality, or at least descent, is open to considerable doubt. It is said that several "books" were made by the sporting people in Paris over the "Spa Competition," and that four to one was offered against the "Beautiful Fatma" by some wary wights who knew that she was "scratched" and would not "run." On the other hand, a gentleman here was bold enough to "back the winner," who is a Mademoiselle Soucaris, of Guadeloupe, even before she was nominated.

Some of the property at Chenonceaux belonging to Madame Pelouze, sister of M. Wilson, has been just sold for the purpose of clearing off the lady's debts. The prices obtained—particularly for the pictures—were absurdly small. A work attributed to Cuyp went for £20; and another, supposed to be by "Claude Lorraine," was sold for £16. A splendid mirror encased in a frame of gilded-silver and lapis-lazuli, with rare designs by Tannières, was knocked down for £100, Madame Pelouze having originally bought it for £1,000. The first part of the "Art collection" has now been sold, and realised only a little over £1,000.

Ex-Marshal Bazaine had been ignominiously struck off the rolls of the French army, so that his death still leaves France with only two general officers who bear that highest of military titles, which is proverbially supposed to be within the reach of the rawest recruit who starts on his career of arms with the Marshal's baton in his knapsack. These two officers are Canrobert and Mac-Mahon, their colleague, Marshal Lebœuf, having died, by a rather strange coincidence, only a few months before Bazaine. The rank of Marshal was instituted so far back as the year 1185. The first officer with the title was Clément, who was Lord of Metz and Argentan, and purveyors of the curiosities of history have not been slow to point out that the last soldiers who were promoted to the rank—Bazaine and Lebœuf—were both connected with Metz and Argentan. Bazaine, for instance, was disgraced by reason of his conduct at Metz, while Lebœuf died near Argentan. Since the time of Clément there have been 324 Marshals of France, sixty-seven of whom were appointed during the present century. Few, however, of the French Marshals have led such stirring lives as those of the First Napoléon, who elevated twenty-five of his Chieftains to the rank. His nephew, Napoléon the Third, appointed fifteen during the brilliant days of the Second Empire, when the Sword once more held sway. The families of the most famous of the First Napoléon's Marshals are still represented in France. Bernadotte, Prince of Monte-Corvo, is represented by the Swedish Royal Family; the Princes Murat bear the title of the brilliant cavalry-commander; Berthier's descendant is the Prince of Wagram; Lannes is represented by the family of Montebello; Oudinot, by the Duke of Reggio; Mortier, by the Duke of Trévise and his brothers; Ney, by the children of the Duke of Elchingen; Masséna, by the Duke of Rivoli and the Prince of Essling; Grouchy, by the Marquis de Grouchy; and Poniatowski, by Prince S. Poniatowski. The lines of Marmont, Duke of Ragusa; Duroc, Duke of Frioul; Kellermann, Duke of Valmy; Augereau, Duke of Castiglione, and others, are extinct; while Davoust, Duke of Auerstadt, is represented by a grand-nephew, now a Commander of an Army-corps. Soult's name only is kept up by a grandson, the Comte de Mornay Soult de Dalmatia, while Moncey's title—that of Duke of Conegliano—has been taken by a grandson, the Baron de Gillevoisin. The Third Republic, although, according to the famous phrase of Gambetta, it needs "glory"—La République a besoin d'être glorieuse—has created no new Marshals, and there is but a poor prospect before the Conscript, who cannot hope to take the legendary bâton out of his knapsack, while there is no glory but that which is shed on Autumn-Manœuvres and sham-fights.

All lovers of truffles owe a tribute of gratitude to John of France, Duke of Berry, and third son of John the Good, because he was the first, according to M. Luce, to make the esculent popular in the North of the Kingdom. Of course M. Luce may be wrong, and some other truffle-hunter may have been in existence before John; but at all events M. Luce, who has read a paper on the absorbing topic before the Academy of Fine-Arts, is positive on the subject, and says that he has original documents to prove his assertions. M. Luce has also discovered that John used to gamble a great deal, and that he was invariably bled before he began to play, probably for the purpose of saving him from an apoplectic attack in the event of his losing. Besides being a gourmet and a gambler the Duke was a collector of dogs, bears, and giants'-bones. He died in 1416, after a most useful career so far as his efforts in the direction of truffles were concerned.

Allamacher—the Versailles printer, who lately heard that he was the sole legatee of a rich citizen in the United-States, once a Frenchman—has not been seen since the memorable occasion, when he assembled all his colleagues and gave them a banquet. He went to Paris in order to call on the American Consul, who, however, had received no notice of the remarkable legacy. Allamacher, it appears, received hundreds of letters containing applications of various kinds, among them being one from a damsel who told the reputed legatee that she was "golden-haired and divinely-formed." The question now is—Did the printer fall into the hands of this sylph and her companions, or has he committed suicide owing to the non-existence of the wonderful legacy?

Yesterday a statue was unveiled at Landrecies to General Dupleix, the hero of the French East-Indies and the gallant opponent of Clive. The general is represented standing in a determined attitude and grasping the flag of France. The Government was not very strongly represented at the inauguration of the monument, and the inhabitants of Landrecies were disappointed because Admiral Krantz, Minister of Marine and the Colonies, was unable to attend.

M. de Lesseps, accompanied by his son Charles, is working the Departments of the Dordogne and the Gironde. At Bergerac the Mayor, Municipal Council, and all the local shareholders of the Panama-Canal Company, met the Grand Français at the station, and gave him an enthusiastic welcome. In the evening, after a banquet, M. Charles de Lesseps lectured on the prospects of the Panama Company. Yesterday M. de Lesseps and his son arrived in Bordeaux.

A big "blackamoor," who rejoices in the Hellenic name of "Phœbus Apollo," and was for some time employed to go round the city in a van, accompanied by two other Ethiopians, for the purpose of advertising a remarkable soap, has been the principal actor in a peculiar escapade on the Grand-Boulevard. "Phœbus," after his day's work was done, was in the habit of lounging up and down the Boulevard in the neighbourhood of the Faubourg Montmartre, and during one of his nocturnal meanderings he beheld a gay and youthful person attired in widow's weeds sitting outside a café, and sipping some innocuous refreshment of the syrupy sort. "Phœbus" marked the apparent widow and rolled his orbs at her in an amorous manner. He patrolled up and down outside the café watching the lady all the time, until at last, wearied and annoyed by the assiduous attentions of the "Black Apollo," she called a male friend and laid a statement of the case before him. The friend, however, did not seem inclined to try immediate conclusions with the burly "blackamoor," and contented himself with offering to take the widow to her home in a cab. This was agreed to, and the pair left the café, got into a vehicle, and were driven away. "Phœbus Apollo," however, was not to be beaten. The dame having eyed him from top to toe with the most unmitigated contempt as she entered the cab, and having also muttered something which "Phœbus" interpreted as a burning insult, the "darkey" ran after the cab and arrived at the widow's residence just as she was being handed out of the fiacre by her white champion. Without saying a word "Apollo" darted at the damsel "all in black-arrayed" and dealt her a tremendous blow in the chest. Screams immediately arose on the night air, the white champion grappled with the dusky desperado, and "Apollo" soon found himself in the custody of the upholders of the Law. "Phœbus" appeared before the Eighth Correctional-Chamber of Police to answer for his extraordinary conduct, which he ascribed to the fact that the gay, youthful, and fascinating widow had called him the most opprobrious of names, adding, moreover, certain epithets to her libel, which reflected on the colour and nationality of the accused. The widow denied the bad language, and said that, although she might have thought a great deal about the "darkey" while he was annoying her by his attentions, she was extremely careful not to commit herself by saying anything which might be used against her. This her white champion corroborated, and the "blackamoor" was sent away from the Boulevard for a month.

An addition is about to be made to the five volumes of Victor Hugo's Works, which have been issued since the death of the poet. The new publications will consist of prose-essays, dramas, and poems, the first comprising "Notes of Travel," in England, Belgium, Holland, and Spain; a metaphysical treatise called "Essai d'Explication" and some of the poet's "Letters" on purely literary subjects. Among the dramas will be "Les Jumeaux," relating to the "Man with the Iron Mask" and "Amy Robsart," which was played without success in 1827, but was lost for many years. The poetry will consist of a great work entitled "Dieu," "Les Années Funestes," a satire on the Second Empire, various stray pieces, and finally the fragmentary compositions written at random on pieces of paper, which will be called "L'Océan." These works will form at least ten volumes, the first of which will be issued next year.

NEWS FROM VIENNA.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Oct. 1.

Yesterday the Emperor opened a large new Public Park in one of the suburbs of Vienna. The Park occupies the site of what has long been known as the "Turkish bastions," outside the Fortifications, at the foot of the Kahlenberg, a favourite Summer-resort of the Viennese. The Emperor, in opening the grounds, said that the time had now come to demolish the old city-walls, which have so long impeded the architectural growth of the capital. The new Park will prove a great boon to tens of thousands of the population.

Countess Batthyany, widow of Count Lajos Batthyany, the great Hungarian patriot, who was executed by the Austrians in 1849, died yesterday, in Buda-Pest, in her seventy-second year. At the time of the Count's imprisonment, on the eve of the day of his death Countess Batthyany, on taking leave of him, presented him with a dagger, so that he might escape dying on the gallows. While in the act of taking his own life he was observed, and the weapon was taken from him. He had, however, succeeded in cutting his throat, and was afterwards shot by the military. The widowed Countess during forty years lived a life of strict retirement. Shortly after the coronation of the Emperor as King of Hungary, the Hapsburgs, anxious to conciliate the powerful Hungarian aristocracy, endeavoured to effect a reconciliation with the Batthyanys, but the Countess refused, although the Emperor in person called at the Palace of the Batthyanys in Buda-Pest.

A duel has taken place, near Wiener-Neustadt, between Count Sternberg and Count Andor Szecheni. Although two bullets were fired on either side neither duellist was wounded. Recent statistics prove that duelling is going out of fashion in Austria-Hungary, probably because it is no longer confined to the nobility, or, as a well-known Hungarian duellist said, "Our billiard-markers and barbers have of late years discovered that they also have an honour to defend."

The Earl and Countess of Suffolk and Lady Muriel Howard have arrived in town in order to attend the marriage of Captain Spicer and Lady Margaret Fane.

The Emperor and Empress of Russia, accompanied by the Czarewitch and the Grand Duke George, arrived on Sunday at Vladikavkas.

The Duke and Duchess of Bedford, and family, left Eaton-square for Woburn Abbey yesterday afternoon.

In reference to the projected new Russian Four per Cent. Foreign Loan, it is stated on good authority that the issue will not be made during the present year, M. Vyshnegradsky, the Finance Minister, maintaining his resolution not to apply to foreign credit in 1888.—Reuter.

A Reuter's telegram, dated Cairo, Oct. 1, states: "According to the monthly statement of receipts of the Caisse of the Public Debt, the amount encashed last month for the Unified Debt was £E135,000, and for the Privileged Debt £E29,000. The total amounts encashed since the payment of the last coupon are £1,1 3?0 0 0 and £E222,000 respectively."

GERMAN COURT AND POLITICS.

AUTHENTICITY OF THE "DIARY."

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

BERLIN, Oct. 1.

I must revert once more to the question of Kaiser Frederick's Diary. From information in my possession, which reaches me from a trustworthy source, I can affirm positively that every word of the Diary is genuine. Moreover, people are entirely on the wrong track about it. The real state of the case, for which I can vouch, is as follows: It was never either lithographed or printed or destined for publication. Even the Empress Frederick herself had never seen it, and knew nothing whatever about its publication before she read it in the Deutsche Rundschau. On the other hand, one of the late Kaiser Frederick's most intimate friends, who was with him during the Franco-German War, did see the Diary, and says that every word that we have now read in the Deutsche Rundschau is genuine. He has, however, no idea what became of it after he saw it, nor how it came into print. It is of no use arguing from what seems likely or unlikely to have been in his late Majesty's Diary. What I have stated above is beyond question, for it emanates from an unprejudiced person who read the original.

It is generally believed that any soreness caused in South Germany or elsewhere by this publication will very soon wear off. Many passages might have been erased, especially the one about Napoleon, which does not concern the present generation of Germans; but if all the savour had been extracted from the salt there would have been nothing left. Anyhow, the memory of the exalted dead has gained by a further registration of the magnanimity and nobleness of his character, whilst the living cannot lose anything at all by the disclosures that have been made.

I am bound to record certain facts about the course events are taking in Germany, connected with the publication of Kaiser Frederick's Diary. First and foremost, it is evident that nobody in well-informed circles attaches the slightest weight to Prince Bismarck's démentis, as contained in his report. Next, it is beyond dispute that Kaiserin Victoria knew nothing whatever about the extracts published in the Deutsche Rundschau, nor of any intention to publish them. No person, on the contrary, has been more distressed and pained by Professor Geffcken's unpardonable indiscretion than her Majesty, who has just bade farewell to the home of her married life. During her last days at Schloss Friedrichskron, which she and the late Kaiser made beautiful, and regarded as their home, her hours were rendered still sadder by the indiscretion of her husband's quondam intimate friend, and the ruthless accusation put forward by the German Chancellor. I need scarcely add that the effect of this double blow has not been without its effects on the health of the illustrious lady, who has already had so much to suffer.

In reading the accusation referred to it should be noted that Prince Bismarck always confuses the Government with the Court, and vice versa, to suit his purpose when speaking of England. I do not dispute that Lord Granville, the British Foreign Minister in 1870, was very French in his sympathies at that time, but nobody can say this of the English Court. Prince Bismarck must know this, for everybody is acquainted with the Queen's words on the events of those days, as recorded in her published diary.

I received to-day a very important communication from Munich, in which my informant, who is in an exceptionally good position to judge, says that Prince Bismarck's report has fallen very flat in Bavaria. It is also pointed out in the papers there that the Crown Prince's language, if genuine, would rather have been statesmanlike than otherwise. "Besides," adds my informant, "the very same policy was followed by Prussia in 1866 against her ally of 1864, who has since turned out the staunchest of her friends in Europe."

With regard to Geffcken, it is so far unknown how he came into possession of the document, though the terms of intimacy on which he lived with the Crown Prince may explain this. Geffcken was examined several times and at great length yesterday by the Public Prosecutor, and to-day by the Juge d'Instruction. The examination is kept secret, as I learn from Hamburg, and therefore everything must be accepted for the present with caution. Nothing is yet known as to whether the defendant is to be removed to Leipzig or not. He is perfectly calm, and has in no way lost his self-possession.

How Professor Geffcken came by the portion of Kaiser Friedrich's Diary is the knotty point. It is believed that he took an opportunity to copy from the original at some time or other. As, however, the authorities can easily compare what has been published with the original, there can be no difficulty whatever in deciding whether it is spurious or not.

I am in a position to contradict two errors which have originated in Paris. This particular Diary was not left behind at the Villa Zirio; that only was the Diary of the period the late Kaiser spent at San Remo, so that the little story founded on this incident falls to the ground—and, again, Kaiserin Friedrich never showed her husband's letters written during the war to anybody. The then Queen Augusta, the Crown-Princess, and Princess Friedrich Charles were the only august personages receiving letters from the scene of the war who consistently did not show any correspondence from their respective husbands.

I can also add that the "Diary of 1870-71" was never lithographed or distributed amongst friends; this was only done with the Diaries of the Italian, Spanish, and Eastern journeys. The whole matter is as plain as possible, and can easily be settled if the proceedings are carried out fairly. The only question to be decided is how Geffcken got his copy, for whether it coincides with the original has beyond a doubt been determined more than a week ago.

To-night's Freisinnige Zeitung publishes extracts from the Diary written on the late Kaiser's Eastern tour.

"THE FIRST OF OCTOBER."

Pheasant-shooting commenced yesterday, and, while in the South of England and most of the Midland Counties, where the weather was bright and fine, though cold, excellent sport was obtained, some of the North-Western districts were less fortunate, being visited by heavy rainfalls or snowstorms of more or less severity. In East Berkshire the day opened under the most favourable auspices. At Windsor some of the finest birds are generally shot by the Queen's keepers upon the Royal demesne, and sent to her Majesty, at Balmoral; but many of those in the Great Park coverts are reserved for the guns of the Prince of Wales and other members of the Royal family. In North Warwickshire sportsmen were early astir, owing to the splendid weather, and some capital sport was met with in various parts of the district. The birds were found to be fairly numerous and in good condition, and the success experienced by some of the shooting parties compensated to some extent for the recent disappointments among the partridges. Our Chester correspondent states: "There are few counties where game-breeding is more extensively practised than in Cheshire. There is an enormous head of game on the Duke of Westminster's estate at Eaton Hall. The gamekeepers have also been successful in the preserves of the Marquis of Cholmondeley, Lord Crewe, Lord Tatton of Egerton, and Sir Philip Egerton, of Oulton Park. The breeding season was late, and pheasants will take another fortnight to develop. Battue shooting was impracticable to-day, owing to the density of the foliage, but considerable bags were made at the covert sides and hedgerows." In the East Riding of Yorkshire the circumstances were favourable at the opening, but late in the forenoon rain fell rather heavily. A good many preserves were opened, and excellent bags made on Sir Tatton Sykes's estate at Sledmere and other places. The birds were in fine condition. Ground game is plentiful. During Sunday night and yesterday North Wales was visited by a series of storms of rain, hail, and snow, and the higher peaks of the mountains are white. It is many years since the thermometer dropped so suddenly. During the week it was pretty steady, at 53, but on Sunday night it fell to 45. Our Westmoreland correspondent telegraphs: "Very little execution was done among the pheasants to-day. A large number of birds are bred in the county, and in number and condition they are this season up to the average. During the morning a fall of snow, which lasted nearly three hours, prevented sportsmen going out. At noon, however, the weather cleared up, and the remainder of the day was fine, rendering sport possible. A few birds were sent into Kendal, and were sold at 6s 6d and 7s per brace." Similar reports have been received from Cumberland and the North Lancashire districts.

CANADIAN INDEPENDENCE THREATENED.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

TORONTO, Oct. 1.

The subjoined despatch, signed Erastus Wiman, was handed in to-day at the offices of the Toronto newspapers. A request was subsequently made that it should be suppressed, and this was complied with by all the journals except the Empire, which published the document, commenting severely at the same time on the conspiracy against Canadian interests, which it appeared to disclose. The message ran as follows:

"New York, Sept. 29.

"I deem it my duty to say that information from Washington has reached me of a reliable character, to the effect that the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs have during the past few days, in furtherance of the views of its chairman, Senator Sherman, been discussing the question of inviting the Dominion of Canada to join the United States. So far have matters progressed that it is not at all unlikely that a resolution will be reported for the concurrent action of both Houses declaring it to be the duty of the President to open negotiations with Great Britain, looking to political union between the English-speaking nations on this Continent. The condition attending the invitation to Canada is understood to be that the United States would assume the entire Debt of the Dominion, estimated at three hundred million dollars. Commercial union was urged as the basis of the proposed negotiations, on the ground that, while a majority might be secured for it, only a small minority favoured political union, but the sentiment of the Committee was so strong in favour of proposing at first political union that it was impossible to contend with it."

UNITED STATES.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

Chicago, Sept. 30.—On yesterday's wheat market sales were reported to have been effected at $2, though they were not officially announced. The corner in September wheat, though practically a local affair, attracts attention in the country because of its uniqueness. The excitement in wheat also affected provisions.

Jacksonville, Sept. 30.—Seventy-nine fresh cases of yellow fever and six deaths have been registered here during the past twenty-four hours.

LYCEUM THEATRE.

It is an invidious task to tell unpalatable truths to artists whose ambition is far stronger than their talent, and who are persuaded that clever trick will pass muster for genius; but it is well not to shirk an obvious responsibility. The much-vaunted "Parisian Romance," that so delighted American audiences, was received last night with the grave solemnity of distrust, and both play and actor were awarded a firm but respectful negative. Mr. Richard Mansfield cannot justly complain of any irritability, prejudice, or ill-treatment. For once in a way the temper of the audience was singularly mild. There were no interruptions, no disturbances, nothing to agitate the nerves of the performers; the play crept on dismally to its dreary conclusion, and when the curtain fell there was a faint summons of courteous recognition before the audience slowly departed in solemn silence. The reason of this was obvious. Octave Feuillet's play, not a good one at the best, requires a style and finish foreign to the nature and capability of Mr. Mansfield's company. Written in pretentious and inflated phraseology, stuffed full of meaningless and inelegant diction, bombastic in tone and wholly vulgar in expression, there was nothing to save such a drama but acting of a high order, and some special sign of talent that would immediately arrest the attention. It was patiently waited for, but it never came. We were introduced to the salons of the highest Parisian society; we were supposed to see the fatal effects of luxury in the most advanced form of modern civilisation; at one time in a fashionable drawing-room, at another in the dressing-room of a Lutetian Sir Harcourt Courtley; now with ladies of title, and now with the choicest specimens of the half-world. The idea was there, but the result was nothing but pretentious feebleness and ambitious incompetence. Much has been said and written of Mr. Mansfield's performance of the Baron Chevrial. We are told that it took New York by storm; but it must have appealed to audiences whose critical judgment was not biassed by memories of Robson, or a study of such a modern artist as St. Germain. That Mr. Mansfield is clever no one will deny, but that he has in this character learned the art of concealing his art few will admit. To succeed with this old viveur, this patched and painted monstrosity, who lives the life of a satyr and dies babbling blasphemy, there must be something of genius in the actor. The audience must be conquered by a tour de force. St. Germain succeeded in this, but he never showed his method, he never allowed the audience behind the scenes, he did not exhibit that machinery by which he worked his effects. Allowing for this young actor's anxiety and indifferent health, it must be obvious to his sincerest friends that to carry an audience away with you, to startle, to surprise, and to rise to the height of tragedy—for this old demon's death-scene is tragedy in its severest form—something more is needed than clever suggestion and intense application. The amateur is prolific in suggestion; it is the artist who can embody. Actors like Mr. Hare, who are past-masters in the art of detail, who are keenly observant, who study tricks of character and eccentricities of manner, have given us scores of instances of senility and selfishness as startling as Mr. Mansfield's Baron Chevrial. But they have not attempted the delineation of incipient paralysis or the grim horror of actual epilepsy. They have drawn the line exactly where they would be likely to fail. "Know yourself" is a maxim that cannot be too constantly dinned into the ears of the ambitious dramatic student. As yet Mr. Mansfield has not had the experience or the practice to master such a character as this old roué. He could play Sir Harcourt Courtley or Beau Farintosh excellently well; but neither of these eccentric old gentlemen have to drop down dead in a fit whilst toasting abandoned women at a fast supper-party. Well done, such a scene might thrill; feebly executed, it may interest the ignorant, but must disappoint the critical and experienced. It would be a thankless task to dwell on the weakness of the general cast. They may be excellent performers, but they are not at home in Parisian drama, and the general class of acting is not what is generally looked for at the Lyceum. One short scene of importance was carefully and effectively handled by Miss Emma Sheridan, who woke the play up to something like nature, and small characters were brought into prominence by the tact and earnestness of Mr. John Buckstone and Mr. Joseph Frankau. But we feel sure that "A Parisian Romance" has not in it either vigour or vitality enough for a lasting success, and the sooner it is replaced by a play of sounder interest the better.

DEATH OF LORD SACKVILLE.

We regret to announce the death of the Honourable Mortimer Sackville-West, first Lord Sackville, which took place yesterday morning at Knole Park, near Sevenoaks. Lord Sackville was born in 1820, and was the second surviving son of George John, fifth Earl De La Warr, by Lady Elizabeth, Baroness Buckhurst, daughter and co-heiress of the third Duke of Dorset. His Lordship was gazetted an ensign to the Grenadier Guards in 1838, became captain in 1845, and retired from the army in 1850, when he was appointed Lord in Waiting to her Majesty. Lord Sackville's eldest surviving brother—a clergyman—was the second son of the fifth Earl De La Warr, and succeeded on the death of his mother, Baroness Buckhurst, to her estates at Buckhurst, near Tunbridge-wells, and on the death of his elder brother, the sixth Earl De La Warr, to that ancient title, but not to the possession of the princely home at Knole Park—said by the Hon. Lewis Wingfield to be the most interesting mansion in England—which descended to the Hon. Mortimer Sackville-West, who was created first Baron Sackville in 1876, and died yesterday without issue. There are few among our ancient and noble English families which can trace their descent farther back in unbroken line than the Sackville-Wests. Of Knole, their principal country seat, it is impossible to fix the date of foundation with anything approaching to certainty, but it is known that the manors of Knole and Sevenoaks were part of the "terra regia" of the Saxon kings of Kent, by whose descendants they were held after the Domesday survey. Early in the reign of King John, Knole became the property of Baldwin de Bethune, Earl of Albemarle, who gave it to his daughter, the wife of William, Earl of Pembroke. In the two succeeding centuries Knole passed successively into the hands, first of Hugh Bigod, Earl of Norfolk; secondly, of the Grandisons; thirdly, of the Fiennes family, one member of which sold the manor and estate in 1456 to Thomas Bourchier, Archbishop of Canterbury, who was killed at the battle of Barnet, and bequeathed Knole to the See of Canterbury. Archbishop Morton and Archbishop Wareham, both of whom were visited at Knole by Henry VII. and Henry VIII., died there, and Archbishop Cranmer, who often resided there, conveyed Knole by indenture to Henry VIII. in 1538. It remained the property of the Crown until Edward VI. granted it to John Dudley, Earl of Warwick and Duke of Northumberland, who was attainted and executed in 1553, when this noble possession again reverted to the Crown.

Queen Elizabeth, in the third year of her reign, granted Knole to Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, who surrendered it once more to his Royal Mistress, by whom it was bestowed upon the celebrated Thomas Sackville, afterwards Lord Buckhurst and Earl of Dorset.

Ever since 1561 Knole and Buckhurst have remained in the hands of the Sackvilles and Sackville-Wests, of whom the elder brother is now seventh Earl De La Warr and the owner of Buckhurst, and the younger, who died yesterday as first Baron Sackville, was owner of Knole, which now descends under special remainder to Sir Lionel Sackville-West, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington. Of Knole House and park it is impossible within the space at our command to give an adequate description. Suffice it to say that from the noble park surrounding the mansion extensive views are obtained of the adjacent country. Scattered about the Weald of Kent many spires and towers catch the eye—those, for instance, of Hever, which recalls Anne Boleyn and her tragic fate; of Penshurst, the cradle and tomb of the Sidneys; of Eridge, once the hunting-seat of Warwick, the Kingmaker; and of Tunbridge Castle, rich in historical associations. The house at Knole is said by Mr. Jewitt, F.S.A., to be "a striking example of the earlier baronial mansion, such as it was before the establishment of a settled peace in England warranted the withdrawal of defences in case of attack from turbulent neighbours." Knole House was taken by Cromwell, who removed from it several wagon-loads of firearms. The Brown Gallery, the chapel, the Cartoon Gallery, the King's Bed-room (in which James I. slept), the dining-room, the Crimson Drawing-room, the Great Hall, the Retainers' Gallery, and the magnificent collection of fire-dogs scattered all over the mansion have been surveyed with delight by many generations of curious visitors, and have made the name of Knole celebrated all over the civilised world.

Lord Sackville was twice married: first, in 1847, to a daughter of Major-General William Dickson (she died in 1870); and secondly, in 1873, to a daughter of Charles Wilson Faber, Esq. Dying without issue, he is succeeded in the possession of Knole by Sir Lionel Sackville-West, now second Baron Sackville. The two sisters of Lord De La Warr, and of the first and second Lord Sackville, are married, the elder to the present Duke of Bedford and the younger to the present Earl of Derby.

PROSPECTUS.

OBJECTS OF THE COMPANY.

This company is formed to meet the present great and increasing difficulties which are encountered by the shipbuilders and manufacturers on the Rivers Tyne and Wear, and the North-East coast generally, in obtaining prompt deliveries of steel plates, bars, and other steel products.

The demand for steel plates is at present largely in excess of the supply, and will probably remain so, notwithstanding the extensions contemplated by the present manufacturers.

In order to show the necessities and requirements of local shipbuilders, it may be stated that the gross tonnage of iron and steel vessels launched from the Rivers Tyne, Wear, and Tees, and from the Hartlepool ports, for the 10 years, 1878 to 1887, inclusive, amounts to about 3,4[illegible] tons, or an average of 34[illegible] tons per annum. The returns for the current year show a steady increase.

The production of steel plates required to meet this annual output (for steel is now almost entirely substituted for iron) represents about 151,757 tons per annum for district requirements only, exclusive of steel plates required for export, and for boiler, bridge building, and other purposes.

LAND AND WORKS.

The company propose to purchase for the sum of £50,000 the valuable land, works, cottages, gas works, wharf, railway, &c., known as the Wear rolling mills, which can readily be converted into admirable works for the manufacture and rolling of steel plates and other steel products.

The property is freehold and consists of 38 acres of land situate on the North bank of the River Wear at Castletown, near Sunderland, in the county of Durham, being connected on the north side with the North-Eastern Railway, and having on the south side a river frontage of 1,000 feet in length and a good depth of water.

Upon the site there are already erected rolling mills, with all the necessary requirements for the manufacture of iron plates, boiler plates, angles, bulbs, merchant bars, for ship, bridge, and boiler building purposes, with boilers, steam engines, fitting shops, pumping stations, gas works, extensive railway connections and sidings, travelling cranes, shear legs, and other appliances, together with 175 workmen's cottages and a manager's house. These cottages are all in a good state of repair, and when the works are in operation are estimated to yield a revenue of about £1,200 per annum.

The works and cottages are connected with the mains of the Sunderland Water Company, but the reservoirs on the property themselves have a capacity of about 3,000,000 gallons, obtained entirely from surface drainage and by pumping from the river, thus securing a highly economic water supply for the work's requirements.

The land, with buildings, gas works, railways, reservoirs, cottages, &c., were valued on May 11th last by the eminent valuers, Messrs. Thomas F. Hedley and Sons, of Sunderland, Birmingham, and London, at the sum of £50,000.

This valuation, however, does not include any of the valuable plant, machinery, utensils, &c., connected with the works.

The iron Works plant, referred to in the report of Mr. William Beardmore, as suitable and adaptable for the purpose of the manufacture of steel, is valued by him at £21,727, and there are also large quantities of other plant, duplicate rolls, castings, loose tools, utensils, and stores, which, if broken up and sold, would realise about £4,000.

PURCHASE MONEY AND CAPITAL.

It is proposed to raise the purchase money of £50,000 by issuing First Mortgage Debentures, bearing interest at 5 per cent. per annum; and arrangements are being made whereby the whole of these mortgage debentures will be taken up.

The share capital of the company is £120,000, but it is expected that it will be unnecessary to call up more than £90,000, of which £50,000 is required for the extension of the works and their conversion into a steel manufactory, and the remainder for the necessary heavy stocks of raw material and manufactured goods, and for working capital.

EXTENSION AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE WORKS.

The report of Mr. William Beardmore, sole proprietor of the well-known Parkhead Forge, Rolling Mills, and Steel Works, Glasgow, shows that in order to lay down such a plant for the manufacture of steel by Siemen's process as would render the works thoroughly efficient and profitable, will involve a further capital expenditure of about £50,000.

MANAGEMENT.

The services of Mr. Beardmore have been secured as managing director for a period of five years, he receiving no remuneration for such services until the company has paid a dividend to its shareholders of 7½ per cent. per annum, after having first deducted the cost of all repairs and renewals and a sum of £5,000 per annum to meet the depreciation and wear and tear.

The confidence which Mr. Beardmore has in the success of the undertaking is further proved by the fact that he is prepared to take a considerable holding in the shares of the company.

PROSPECTS AND PROBABLE RESULTS.

The report of Mr. Beardmore also sets forth the advantageous and economical situation of the works, both for the receiving of raw material and for the delivering of manufactured goods.

The estimated output of finished steel plates, bars, &c., after the reconstruction of the works as proposed by Mr. Beardmore, may be safely taken at 30,000 tons per annum. The profit per ton required to be earned by the company upon the foregoing production in order to pay the interest on the mortgage debentures and a dividend of 10 per cent. per annum upon the paid-up capital would only necessitate a profit of 7s. per ton; whereas, according to the present market price for steel plates, the profit of the company would considerably exceed this percentage.

The profit stated above does not include the revenue to be derived from the cottage property of the company, and the margin of profit per ton, as estimated by Mr. Beardmore, is so large as to leave little doubt that the profits to be earned by the company will yield a handsome return to investors, after providing for all necessary depreciation, and for the formation of a reserve fund by which the mortgage debentures may be paid off should this be considered desirable.

The foregoing estimate of profits is generally confirmed by the excellent results which have followed the working of large kindred undertakings on the East Coast, such as the Consett Iron Company (Limited), the North-Eastern Steel Company (Limited), and others.

AGREEMENTS, COSTS, &c.

The company will enter into possession of the property as soon as the legal requirements are carried out.

There is no promotion money, the company only paying the costs and charges incidental to the formation of the company.

Where no allotment is made, the deposit money will be returned in full; where the number of shares allotted is less than that applied for, the surplus on application money will be credited on allotment.

Copies of the memorandum and articles of association, of the proposed agreement for the purchase of the property referred to, of the valuation of Messrs. Thomas F. Hedley and Sons, and of the report of Mr. William Beardmore, may be seen at the offices of the solicitors and auditors of the company, and prospectuses and forms of application may be obtained at Messrs. Woods and Co., Bankers, Sunderland and Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and at the Union Bank of London, London.

Applications for shares, accompanied by the sum payable on application, must be made on the proper form, and will be received at the offices of the bankers stated above.

Dated 29th of September, 1888.

At present there is not a School of Shorthand in London that has more than one teacher to attend to all its pupils except the Metropolitan, where there are 10 teachers and readers. The effect of this is that it is the only establishment where adequate tuition and practical training are obtainable by every pupil and separate practice to writers of all speeds concurrently. This school largely owes its premier position to the fact that it devotes all the energies of its large staff to the one subject, Shorthand. Tutors and boys knowing shorthand do best at all exams. This is the only school with an adequate staff to complete its pupils, therefore

ITS RESULTS are the HIGHEST KNOWN. Soc. of Arts and Pitman's certificates. Its total exceeds that of all other schools in England combined. Public reporting, gold medal competition, all medals awarded. To enable youths from school and gentlemen without business experience to take commercial appointments, there is a separate school for
